When he wants to try his teeth he generally hunts up one of the most valuable things on the premises, be it a sealskin sack or an autograph crazy quilt. They don't chew the entire article up, but just gnaw a hole through the most conspicuous part and then look for something else. One of these malicious rodents got into a drawer of Smith & Anderson's desk night before last and found a bunch of promissory notes. This was a picnic for Mr. Mouse. He selected two of the most valuable, one being given for the sum $500, and began operations. Now, to show the cussedness of the "varmint." He didn't destroy the notes by apy means, but he selected the corner con taining the signatures and gnawed them off slick and clean. He did not carry the signatures away with him, but left them in a thousand pieces. Not one word or letter of the notes be

CAPTAIN S. GREENWOOD, About a year ago he observed a strange change in his feelings. He felt tired instead of vigorous; nervous instead of strong. His appetite became poor and his sleep broken. He tried to overcome these feelings, but they would not go. He then noticed pains and irritation in the water channels, and that the fluids passed were often thick and with a seum on top or a brick-dust sediment at the boitom. All these were the sure symptoms of that fearful disease, Catarrh of the Bladder, which has always been considered incurable, and they continued until the Captain was in a terrible condition. But he is the picture of health and vigor to-day, and he owes it entirely to that wonderful medicine, Hunt's Remedy. Capt. Greenwood says: "I am so certain of the great value of Hunt's Remedy, that I alway carry a supply on shipboard for the uses of my men, and I prescribe it whenever they are aliling. After curing me as it did, and restoring my vife, (whom the best physicians of New York said was dying of tumor,) to perfect health, I swear by it."
