of some settlers in Oregon, and is imof some settlers in Oregon, and is important to many others. Heretofore the department has required new proof in cases where the claimants have made proof at a day other than that of the notice of the publication, or when taken before an officer other than that named in the notice. The practice now will be to receive the proof and submit the entry to the board of equitable adjudication, where, if there are no other irregularities, the entry to be de-

The will be approved and recommended for first floor of the factory is occupied by paper cutting and embossing machines. The paper Sam Jones recently told a clergyman on which valentines are printed is received of his intention to start a big revival from the manufacturer direct and is not in a in Los Angeles, Cal. "Why do you do condition for use. It must be cut in pieces. that?" asked the elergyman; "it is the City of Angels." "Mebbe it is," re-teen comic valenties. After being cut, the plied S m, "but I guess the bulk of paper is taken to the second floor and printed. Three hundred out of the four hundred em-Ployes in the factory are women and girls. While the majority of the work is done by O. H. Blount's skilled labor, some departments are operated

After a drawing is made and photographed the usual course in making process cuts is followed, but it must not be supposed that a valentine can be struck off complete by one impression. In some cases valentines pass through no less than a dozen impressions. Each impression adds a different shade or color to the picture. Take for example a drawing of a mechinist at work. The man's hat is red, his face and arms are pink, his hair and mustache are blue, with a tinge of black, the apron and table are yellow, the trousers are green, while his shoes are blue with a tinge of black. Sentimental valentines are made of fancy paper and satin. The plates pass through the same process as comic. The handsome, highly perfumed valentines, which the languishing swain pays from $3 to $5 for, are hand paint or, as the superintendent said, touched up The touching up process consists of artistically daubing point here and there about the outer surface of the valentine. These basty strokes result in flowers, pictures descriptive of the billings of turtle doves and pastoral scenes. Now we come to the poet Chaucer, Shakes-peare, Milton, Tennyson or any of the bright galaxy of bards is nowhere compared to this He gets a weekly salary, and he can grind out poetry by the yard, by the rod, b the mile. They say valentine poetry is diffi-cult to make, but, bless you, this tellow roll

Men endowed with highest gifts, The vision and the faculty divine, Yet lacking the accomplishment of verse." But this fellow isn't troubled with anything -they are just verses. Necessarily this poet must have some system about his work. Inspiration may be a first class thing for a bard who has some one to foot his bills, but in-spiration never put butter on a man's bread; or, in fact, furnished him with any bread at all. So our valentine poet, who is obliged to turn out so much poetry a day, necessarily must do it like a machine.

He probably writes his comic valentines something like this. First, he thinks of a subject which must be one of a class familiar to every one. For instance, a barber. Then he thinks of some failing in his subject with which every one is familiar. A barber will 13.9 talk, and every one knows it. A comic valentine must, of course, be a joke on the sub-Notice is hereby given that the copartner-ship heretofore existing under the firm name of Messenger & Smith, and doing business in Ashland, Oregon, is this day dissolved by mutual consent. JAS, E. SMITH, B. L. MESSENGER. E. So it must refer in a sort of half satiri-cal, half comical way to his failing. It must contain some slang to make it a trifle spicy, and must be perfectly intelligible to every one. So the valentine poet will run his fingers through his hair, take a deep breath, and evolve a comic valentine on the barber

> Let me see, must cut his talk short—short, sort, sport. That's it, and here it is: TO THE PARDER.

Looks easy enough, don't it? Try it and see. Sentimental valentines are harder to grind U. S. Bakery spirit into a lover. The most prevalent valen tine usually wind's up with the words. "And be my valentine," but this is getting pine. It takes the poet about three minutes to grind out the following: Oh maiden fair, with golden hair Notice to City Tax Payers

For you with love I pine,
Oh will you grant that biessing rare,
And be my valentine.
If this weren't so old it might do, but the If this weren't so old it might do, but the poet must strike something a little more original. So be turns to Cupid. Of course, nothing really new can be written, but he can clothe an old chestnut in a new burr, so to speak. So Cupid comes to the front once J. M. MCCALL, Dissolution of Copartnership. more. Cupid is always associated with an more. Cupid is always associated with an arrow, but nothing will rhyme with arrow, except wheelbarrow, which word wouldn't do at all; marrow, which is equally bad, farrow or harrow, which are worse, and care oh, which isn't good, because it's two words. So the poet turns his arrow into a dart, which rhymes with art and heart, and evolves the following: ontinue the bisiness, assumes the liabilities and will collect all accounts of the late firm.

C. S. GRAVES.
S. I. SONNICHSEN.
Ashla ed. Or., Jan. 23, 18-2.

I stole into a wood one day
To learn young Cupid's art;
I crept up where he sleeping lay.
And took from him a dart:
In this, my valentine, I pray
Twill touch your maiden heart.

It seems ridiculous, don't it, to put such hallowed things as the god of love, love itself, valentines and the rest into a machine and grind them out: But that's what our and grind them out? But that's what our poet has to do. But it is pleasant to think that the verses which are ground out with such regularity by the poor fellow—have pity on him—are sent by lovers all over the land with such genuine sincerity that, though they are machine made and warranted not to corrode or rust, they nevertheless carry their sentiment with them, and do a great deal to help poor Cupid in the task which the little fellow has set for himself.
