movement looking to the establishment of an ice manufactory in Salem, telegraphed that it is his intention to have the buildings erected, machinery here and everything ready to begin the manufacture of ice by the first of April. Salem will be the distributing point for a large scope of country and much ice will be required. The plant will have a capacity of seven tons a day. It is proposed to have in connection a cold storage and refrigorating cars. These cars will run on the line on the O. & C., and will supply all intermediate towns with ice. The plant will cost $50,000.—[Journal.]

Portland has now two wagon and foot bridges across the Willamette, the Morrison street bridge and the road-States of the Union Washington, Mouway across the Oregon Railwoy & Navigation company's steel bridge in the north end of the city. The latter was both sides of the Union Washington, and the Chion Washington, a thrown open for traffic Thursday and the people of the city were invited to promenade thereon free of charge all the afternoon and evening. This roadway will be under the same management as the Morrison street bridge and the charge ment as the Morrison street bridge and tickets interchangable. There will also be a street car line across the new bridge in a few days. It is said there is a beautiful view of the harbor and the hills back of Portland from the the hills back of Portland from the readway and that many will use it to the chairman of the Carritories:
