AFTER BUFFALO CALVES.

BABY STEALING ON THE PLAINS AN EXCITING BUSINESS.

Domestic Cows Corralled to Nurture the Wild Young Ones—A Sample Hunt and What It Netted—What Maternal Affection Will Dare and Do.

Until within the last five years it was not strange or uncommon for buffalo cows and calves to be found herded with the wild buffalo, and the spring roundup always always reported more or less sport for the daring and reckless "cow punchers" with buffalo calves. Western men have at last, however, begun to realize, with more than a little regret, that the large droves of buffaloes ranging at will over the trackless plains of the territories formed sights that are forever to be lost, and to realize that the successful slaughter of these picturesque brutes has been a waste of gold. The fact that the domesticated buffalo and the cross breeds are both very valuable and easily herded is just now giving a new zest to the sport of buffalo hunting, and the danger of the case now increased ten fold by the fact that the object now is not to kill, but to capture.

To make prisoners of the young or to bring upon one's self the fierce avenging fury of a buffalo cow, by throwing a rope over her ear, requires the utmost skill possessed as well as peculiar dexterity and familiarity with the animal and horse which are found fully developed in the range riders of the western plains. The hunt is profitable if the calf is injured, and the preparations for the care of the calf are not minute, but necessarily expensive. Domestic cows are provided as wet nurses, and a constant watchfulness is observed to insure complete safety for the calf, and to insure a not unprofitable return for the new charges. The calf is usually placed in a corral with its mother, and the mother display excessive modesty in foraging for food, and their mutual care upon the new comers are extremely amusing.

An important element in the buffalo hunting of today is the fact that females give birth to their young very early in the spring, and the hunt must be completed before the beginning of the spring season, or the calves or the calves become too strong to capture alive.

A SKEWERED RAID.
In February two four horse teams, with heavy wagons behind them, pulled slowly out of the town of Lawrence, Ky. In the first wagon, and in charge of the expedition, was a gentleman known as "the colonel," whose mother tongue was not English, but who with the pleasure of anticipation and whose wagon was packed with comfortable bedding, "grub," cooking utensils, and beer, but least, a variety assortment, consisting of mashed, Martell cigars, tobacco, pipes, etc.
Bonds him down, and he was smiling and evidently content with the world as it is.

The rear wagon contained 2,000 pounds of bailed hay and a quantity of rope to be used for lariat, and was manned by a notable John, who, the colonel swore, could transform a jack rabbit into a pig, or if the over-worn should be laid, could hold the harness leather so that it would lose as a tonstone.

Three days traveling carried the party to the northern boundary of the Red desert, where were scattered, in Indian villages, Chapman and Gomez, a Mexican desperado.
Each hunter had a "string" of eight horses.
Twenty-five dollars was suspended from each of each which should be caught uninjured and sound by the feet. At 10 o'clock on the following morning the hunters started, and at its finish all hands but the cook saddled their horses and "hit the trail," striving the extra horses before them.

After quickly riding for an hour Gomez called attention to a buffalo trail, and followed it some distance, but as the other others, carefully watching ahead. The trail led through sage brush, over the plains, across immemorial dunes, and finally reached the summit of a low range of hills, when he suddenly wheeled his horse and returned to the party. Instantly all was in a ferment, and the hunters were in a moment, the game was in sight. One hundred and four cows and three calves were browsing, unconcerned of the party, and a mile away from the party. Fresh horses were roped and saddled, and the hunters started, and at its finish all hands but the
cook saddled their horses and "hit the trail,"
striving the extra horses before them.

GOOD-BY.

He placed the fragrant flower blooms Nest the warm, glowing, summer sky;
"Keep these, dear heart, and my fondness, True or can never say 'Good-bye'."

"Beloved, oh, wherefore are my fears?
You give me strength and happiness;
Though dangers across the world I see, Your love will be a power to these."

Deep sorrow in her heart subdued, A joy intense o'erspread her face,
"What is the cause, my darling,
"Forever" And with tenderest grace She bowed her head upon his breast.

The soft wind stirred her tresses fair, Faith and hope held his hand so true;
Upon her lips he breathed a prayer:
And trusting, with hands close clasped,
"What is the cause, my darling,
"Forever" And with tenderest grace
She bowed her head upon his breast.

The "last word" is the most dangerous of struggle for the possession of a lighted bombstick. The fellow who is always going some-
