taken upon some savage tribes in the "south seas" by the "shelling of a village" supposed to contain the residences of sundry cannibals who have murdered a European.

It sounds well enough to have it reported that "adequate reprisals" have been made in such cases in the manner indicated, but the following account of how vengeance is taken, together with the reasons for such action, given us by an eye witness of one such occurrence may enlighten us somewhat in regard to the real effect produced by such methods:

President Harrison is opposed to any time. "We need you much," the letter goes on to say, "We have in our midst a sweet-scented literary holly that he will issue any call for a special sendanter, who promised to make Keno known to the whole world in a few weeks.
