on me—I must be permitted to assure of diffidence—I must confess that I feel much embarrassed. And well I may: for as I pause here and for a moment reflect upon the patriotic, national and world-renown achievements of the period, which gave birth to the anniversary we have assembled here to-day to commemorate—and then to cast a glance over the broad expanse of our country to behold the full measure of its power, its influence and its part; we have assembled here to-day to commemorate—and then to cast a glance over the broad expanse of our country to behold the full measure of its power, its influence and its part; we have assembled here to-day to commemorate—and then to cast a glance over the broad expanse of our country to behold the full measure of its power, its influence and its part; we have assembled here to-day to commemorate—and then to cast and monoplate of the immense operations of the memory and the more than there are to-day to of one acre of the lands they till. This is at present the case in the election of the arbitrary power of the monarch, President and Vice-President and United States Senators. There is a Over 20 (20) 000 pages of our density.

Following is a partial report of the able, patriotic and eloquent oration delivered by Hon. Binger Hermann in Ashland on the 4th. Mr. Hermann said:

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I have the honor to appear before you in obedience to arrangements of the day—this ever-welcome day of jubilee, this glorious anniversary of the freedom of our country—and to participate with you in its festivities. But in doing so—in thus rising to discharge the pleasing duty so kindly imposed upon me—I must be permitted to assure of diffidence—I must confess that I

Individual excellence and ment stand for higher passports than the hereditary nobility and acquired riches of other lands. Poor indeed, is that individual who has not some aspiration coupled with the genius of his county. The humblest citizen of the Union may cherish a well founded hope that either himself or his child may reasonably aspire to the highest honors of the state, or to share in the social distinction of his country. The password, "I am an American Citizen," is, in one and the same sentence, both a shield of protection and a badge of respect. Insult this citizen, though he may wander to the uttermost confines of the earth, and at once the mighty nation resents the indignity.
