If ventilation is bad a single case of the disease will produce an infectious atmosphere, which if connected with and favored by the condition of members of the household, will develop new cases, and generally of a more malignant type. "Cleanliness and purity in all things—in dwellings, in clothing, in person, in food and drink, and in the air we breathe, are the chief agencies upon which we must rely to keep diphtheria

2. See to it that the ventilation is part and the air was brought to my notice. I use it and will say it is the society best, and, doubtless, women are the same. Every day men and women intrude too much upon each other. When I walk over to mother's cottage! I stand without her door, hat in hand, and knock for permission to enter. The same is true when she calls at my door. We meet in common only at table. My house is my castle, and even my mother wouldnot break in on my solitude without first asking permission." break in on my solitude without first
