NOTES AND NEWS.

Someone has discovered an industry that has been fostered by the present national administration. It is the writing of books upon finance. Senator Mitchell had a conference with the secretary of the interior and se-cured a reversal of the order issued by the department prohibiting sheep to run at large on the Cascade timber reserve. and there will be no such prohibition of grazing sheep on the reservation.

The Klamath lake basin needs a railroad and expects one in a few years at farthest. But until the railroad comes, its commerce to and from the outside world must be by wagon road. State unison dictates that that commerce should be directed toward Oregon, and the natural route to get to Oregon's metropolis from that section is across the

The president on Friday officially announced the appointment of Richard Olney as secretary of state to succeed the late Walter Q. Gresham, and to take Mr. Olney's place as attorney general the president at the same time nominated Judson Harmon, of Cincinnati, Ohio. Three San Francisco murderers were hanged at San Quentin prison Friday. Cold-blooded murderers have been allowed to go unhung and unpunished so often in California of late years that almost a national ignominy has attached to California justice and this apparent re-form ought to have a salutary effect upon crime in that state.

Political Drift.

Senator J. M. Thurston, in a declara-tion at Salt Lake city the other day, npon the silver question, said that he be-lieved the republican national platform would be substantially the same next year as in 1892 upon that subject. It binds the party to take care of the American product, and Senator Thurston says he believes the obligation will be recognized. He also predicts that two demo-cratic national conventions will be held.

Kentucky republicans held a state convention last week and nominated Col, W. O. Bradley for governor. The financial plank of the platform adopted by acclamation, says: "We are opposed to the free and unlimited coinage of silver, believing it will involve the country in financial ruin. We believe in sound currency and in the use of both gold and silver for coinage, provided always that the dollar in one is made precisely as valuable as the dollar in the other." Upon the tariff, it says: "We favor a tariff so regulated as to protect the interests of all classes of citizens upon articles that may be successfully manufactured or produced in this country."

A state convention of Illinois demoheld at Springfield last Wednesday. Resolutions were adopted calling for the use of both gold and silver as standard money of the U.S. at the ratio of 16 to 1, without waiting for the action of other nations. Resolutions were also adopted favoring a national silver convention to be held by the party not later than August of this year. The resolutions endorsing Governor Altgeld's administration met with some objection but were finally adopted, and the governor's speech for free silver was loudly cheered.

Senator Sherman gave utterance to the following last week: "I think that the democratic party will be hopelessly divided on the silver question. It may be that in Illinois the Altgeld faction will commit the state to free silver, but the democrats in the East will never consent to it. I think the democratic party will split hopelessly on that rock. In our party it is different. I think that even republicans in far Western states will, before long, be for the coinage of silver in limited amounts, and when

That Timber Land.

The decision of the general land office favorable to the claimants in what is known as the Miner timber land contest as reported in last issue, will confirm, in all probability, to Miner the title to a large body of valuable pine timber land in the upper Rogue river country, comprising in all some 9000 acres, it is said.

Miner and Goodfellow are Minneapolis people and if they are not holding it exclusively for speculative purposes, but should undertake the development of their property, the apparant hoarding of such big bodies of available government land their ownership of it might result in a real benefit to the country. Something of the history of the case is told

About three years ago Special Agent Burdette Thayer visited the neighborhood and secured a number of affidavits that Warne and others had contracted to sell the land before acquiring title. The government then instituted proceedings before the Roseburg land office to have the entries canceled. The case came up July 31, 1894, and occupied the attention of the and officials for 58 days. The government was represented by Special Agent J. B. Brockenbrough and A. M. Crawford, and the defendents by E. B. Preble, then of Roseburg; J. R. Buxton of Winlock, Wash., and Lionel Webster, of Medford, Or. The case attracted a great deal of stantion at the time in the conthern part attention at the time in the southern part of Oregon.

Geological Surveys.

Washington, June 6 .- Secretary Smith has approved the plan of operations for the coming fiscal year submitted to him by Director Wolcott of the geological survey. Out of a total appropriation of $515,490 for surveys $118,700 is to be devoted to geological purposes. In the Rocky mountain region, the Aspen mines of Colorado will be studied and preliminary surveys made of the mining regions of New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho and Montana. This will cost $7,000. In the Pacific coast region J. S. Diller will use $4,000 on the coal and gold mines of Oregon, $8,000 two little girls, Misses Verna Force and for coal investigations in Washington, Blanche Logan. It was an innocent exand $9,500 for work in the gold fields of Alaska. In the surveying department, preliminary triangulations will be made in Colorado, Oregon, Washington and Indian territory.

ROYAL FESTIVITIES.

The Crowning of Katherine, Queen of the Roses, at the Opera House Friday Evening—A Pleas-ant Epoch in Ashland's Social History.

Friday evening witnessed one of the most pleasant and interesting social events in the history of Ashland. It had been looked forward to with unusual interest ever since the first ballots for the election of a Queen to preside at the carnival were cast. It increased when the balloting closed and it was learned that a total of 4000 votes had been cast, resulting in the election of Miss Kate Hansen to wear the crown. The interest aroused resulted in filling the opera aroused resulted in filling the opera house Friday evening with one of the largest audiences of well dressed people ever seen in Ashland. They found the opera house decked with a magnificent display of roses which encircled the large auditorium and were displayed in lavish profusion on every side. At the rear end of the stage was a huge bank of roses that reached almost to the ceiling. Reaching from the proscenium floor to the auditorium floor in the center of the stage was a massive bank of roses. Off in the east side of the opera house the throne had been erected. Its rich looking canopy top was roofed over with evergreens, while underneath it was a mat of beautiful roses. Rose bells hung from the ceiling in several parts of the house. The effect of all this taste shown was pleasant and inspiring. pleasant and inspiring.

The seats of the lower floor and gallery were all occupied and available standing room was all taken when O. O. Helman, acting as Herald, announced the approach of the Queen and her party. They came through the west entrance to the opera house auditorium and presented a truly royal appearance. First after the Herald came two of the Knights, Edw. Thornton and Fred Martin. Following these were Misses Letha Duncan and Clara Austin, maids to the queen. Following next was little Miss Marjory Landers in a fairy creation of white and blue, and bearing the crown upon a silver salver. Her little gown was white with blue dots, and a wreath of white rosebuds around the tiny head. In the center of crowned the tiny head. In the center of the party and the center of attraction was Miss Kate Hansen, Queen Katherine, in her royal robe. The robe was royal indeed. It consisted of cream velvet and yellow satin; the body of the dress was of cream velvet, with panel, girdle, sleeves and collar richly embroidered in gold and studded with jewels. The court trainfell in graceful folds from the shoulders and was adged at the bottom with cream and was edged at the bottom with cream roses. The jewels worn by the Queen were resplendent and the golden crown set with diamonds was the crowning effect of the royally royal gown. Following behind the Queen in the royal party and carrying the train of her gown, were the two little pages, Charlie Barnum and Richard Quinn. They were cutely togged out in Fauntleroy suits of black, with white sashes. Misses Susie Martin and Lillie Watson, maids, were next in the and was edged at the bottom with cream out in Fauntleroy suits of black, with white sashes. Misses Susié Martin and Lillie Watson, maids, were next in the procession. The four maids of honor to the Queen were similarly dressed. Their gowns were of white organdie, made in sixteenth century style. The bertha and large puffed sleeves were finished with Valenciennes lace and insertion. Each one wore and carried a boquet of Jacqueminot roses. Knights Will Mitchell and Geo. Gillette were at the rear of the royal procession. The four knights were also included the ladies of Trinity Guild, of the Episcopal church, who had similarly arrayed. They wore regulation dress coats, with knee pants, which with their large shoe buckles, white plumed hats and swords, made up a courtly cos-The royal party passed up through the hall and took their position upon and about the throne. C. B. Watson, Esq., had been chosen to represent the people iu the coronation exercises, and at the close of a few remarks befitting the occasion placed the crown upon the head of Queen Katherine, Mr. Watson said in

The season of flowers in its regal dress greets you, and your subjects sing:

"Gather ye the rosebuds while ye may, For old Time is still a flying; And this flower that smiles so sweet today, Tomorrow will be dying."

The towering pinnacles on the verge your dominions, are clad in garments of royal white in your honor, emblematic of the purity, peace and virtue, that reign in your realm; while from these spotless banks of white, comes "Glad tidings of great joy" in the pearly streams that leap, and sparkle, and sing, in their romping hurry to join in the merry making of flow-ers and fruit in the valleys below. The moonbeams dance and thit in a mystic maze along the hillsides, and play hide and seek with fairies, among the crags and peaks of your mountains. Possessing a scenic beauty unexcelled, your kingdom is a land of flowers, of music, of love and singing water. Your people are therefore endowed with that happy and joyous na-ture, the birthright only of those so fortunately situated. And now they desire that

Let the festivities now begin. The program that followed the cormation exercises was marked by tact and originality from first to last that made it more than ordinarily interesting to the audience. The first was a skirt dance by ercise by innocent children and won applause for its perfect execution. A vocal solo, "Queen of the Rosee," by Mrs. L. L. Merrick had the second place on the program. The words and music were composed especially for the occasion by Mrs. E. C. Landers of this city and its sweet rendition by one of the favorite soloists of Ashland made its reception most hearty. Mrs. Merrick was urged for an encore but only bowed her ac-older people.

The announcement of "a very small operatta by three very small children" brought upon the stage Hal, Georgie and little Marjory Landers, and their short season of opera provoked as much amusement and applause as anything on the program. The operatta had been arranged for them by Mrs. Landers to suit the occasion and the youth of the singers, the oldest of whom is scarcely ten years of age.

Misses Silsby and Roper and Mrs. Misses Silsby and Roper and Mrs. Chrisman were given an ovation as they came upon the stage and made their bow to the Rose Queen and to the audience. The Ashland Lady Quartet is no less a favorite than ever at home and home people are proud of the reception accorded the favorites here as well as at other places they have appeared. Their music would be a credit to any place. The quartet gave a waltz song by Balfe that was charming, and the audience would not be quiet until an encore was responded to.

"You Can't Play in Our Yard" may have been heard by many of the audience before but never in character by the two little girls, Verna Force and Blanche Logan, who carried out their parts cutely and sang the catchy song to a perfection and sang the catchy song to a perfection that left little room for criticism.

"A Street Arab," an original poem by Mrs. Chas. L. Lang of Ashland, was recited by the author, who showed rare elocutionary ability. The verse was written in fascinating ballad style and the author's perfect interpretation of it made it doubly interesting. "The Street Arab" received many compliments. The last number on the program was a comic operatta arranged particularly for the occasion and in which was interwoven not a little bright repartee of local appli-cation. Jacobi, a retired bootblack, now a millionaire, who returns to his native land to wed the maiden of his choice, was impersonated by Algie Dixon, and the many compliments his effort received would have been creditable to a more experienced comic opera star. Lucy Ann, the fair maiden of his choice, was taken by Miss Carrie Roper. Miss Roper's grace upon the stage is equalled only by her well known vocal abilities. Her rendition of "Ben Bolt" was particularly well received. The third character in the opera, Sophronia, a young lady of fortune and feeling, was impersonated by Miss Mary Silsby who was able to do it justice. The selections were arranged from "Pinafore", many of them, as well as from numerous of the ever popular songs of the day and were particularly happy and fitting as well as flattering to the talent of Mrs. Landers and Miss Roper, who arranged them.

After these exercises the Queen was seated on her throne, the other members

The members of the Guild all worked for the success of the carnival and all of them are entitled to the credit for it. Help was given by many non-members, too, chief among them being Mrs. O. Coolidge, who grew and arranged the handsome bank of roses in front of the stage and which was so much admired. Miss Carrie Roper had charge of the literary and musical program which exhibited such tact and talent and won the highest compliments from visitors as well as home people.

A large delegation of visitors from down the valley and from points south were in attendance at the carnival and gave it liberal praise.
