most interesting gatherings ever held in this part of the state. The weather opened fair on Tuesday and there has been little to complain of on that line. The opening day saw a larger attendance than usual at these gatherings and it has increased each day until today (Thursday) the streets were filled with people reaching up into the thousands and the day has been almost a general holiday. Ashland was never more generally decorated on any occasion before probably. Flags are flying from every cupola and are conspicuous in business and private residences while bunting and evergreens line Main street on both sides. Stretching across Main street near Hotel Oregon a double triumphal arch was constructed, enveloped in evergreens, flags and bunting and on top stands the full life size figure of an American soldier, with musket and bayonet fixed as in sentry duty, apparently standing guard over the entire city but challenging no

R. people are to be congratulated from Oregon, John H. Mitchell and Geo. W. McBride, to spend a day or two at the encampment. The procession, in charge of Capt. J. L. May, was formed in the plaza and marched to the train. The artillery piece, drawn by four horses, led, followed by the Ashland band, Co. D and Co. A. Next came the various G. A. R. Posts and a long line of ladies of the W. R. C. Behind these came the teachers and pupils of the Ashland State Normal School to the number of over 70. They marched under a beautiful purple and gold satin banner on which was inscribed "O. S. N. S.-Ashland" in letters of gold, were highly complimented for the creditable display of the school. Next after them came the pupils of the public schools, in charge of Principal Hitchcock and their various teachers. They num-bered up into the hundreds and presented a live picture. After the senators had alighted from the train they were met by the reception committee and taken to a stand where they could review the procession as it marched back toward town from the depot.

Our report closed with the assembling at Chautauqua to hear the addresses by the senators and the interesting musical program prepared. At night a grand ball at opera house and tomorrow and Saturday program as printed elsewhere.

TUESDAY EVENING. What was generally estimated as the largest of the many large audiences that have assembled in the Chautauqua building during its history crowded the big auditorium Tuesday evening to listen to the program of W. R. C. night, and still many went away unable to get inside the doors at all. The entertainment was prepared by the ladies of Burnside Corps, and the president, Mrs. Jas. Chisholm, presided. The program opened with music by the Ashland band followed by prayer by the district chaplain, Rev. Robt. McLean. Afterward came an appropriate recitation by Msss May Powell and a vocal solo by Miss Thomas which brought liberal applause from the audience and marked Miss Thomas as a favorite. A chorus by a class of girls and a dialogue by a colored women and her son added to the pleasure of the entertainment. Miss Mollie High as the colored woman and were the two little sons of D. C. Agler.
"Our Flag," was by five little girls—
Misses Mona Emery, Fannie Carter, Lena Roach, Ida and Alice Ganiere. They did well. The double quartet of young folks which gave an entertaining song was com-posed of Misses Ida Cottrell, Ida Taylor, Cora Carter, Susie Helman and Masters Henry Carter, Willie Ferguson, Willie Virgin and Ernest High. Mrs. J. Mc-Clunie, who had charge of training the young people in the musical part of the program, also rendered a vocal solo in pleasing style.

The address of Rev. Robt. McLean, like all of his addresses are, was a success. He dwelt on some of the features of the war out of the ordinary line of camp fire talks and held the immense audience for twenty short minutes with thought food and humor nicely blended, elicited an applause frequently. Mr. McLean is one of those honest enthusiastic men who defines his position with a clearness not to be misunderstood, and then hews to the line with the courage of a man of intelligence and honest conviction. the war. Hers was a special province and she filled it with a courage, devotion and judgment not a whit behind her hardy sons and husbands on the field. Her patriotism and work needed no ballot. The mothers, sisters and sweethearts of warriors, sustained them by their love, courage and devotion and kept the little home intact for the return of their heroes. Her love teaching and example moulded the character of future defenders and gave a firmer security to the flag and constitution. He thought her sphere above and beyond the mere casting of the ballot. The home is the seat of power, said the speaker; there character is moulded; the scepter is love and that instinctive judgment so peculiar to her marks her sphere with a dis-tinctive character for the moulding of

WEDNESDAY.

Yesterday morning's assemblage at the Chautauqua building was called to order and the exercises opened with prayer by the chaplain, Mayor Casey delegated City Attorney C. B. Watson to deliver the address of welcome on behalf of the city to the old soldiers and sailors. Attorney Watson made one of his peculiarly felicitous addresses and on behalf of the city gave the veterans the freedom of the town—in fact turned it over to them—he The fourth annual reunion of the old soldiers and sailors of Southern Oregon and Northern California which began at Ashland Tuesday is proving one of the most interesting gatherings ever held in this part of the state. > carriage passed in through the archway and to the hotel. At two p. m. the auditorium was again packed—not less than 1200 people being present to hear the address of Hon. Binger Hermann, member of congress from this district. Mr. Hermann has served his constituents so well and for so many years that the mere announcement of his coming was sufficient to bring together the rank and file and patriotic people within reach. For two hours Mr. Hermann held his large audience, and those who have heard him often are unanimous in declaring that, though always up to a high standard in his statesmanlike speeches, on this occasion "Binger" outdid himself. Those who failed to hear his speech missed one of sentative Hermann and a large number of visitors the Ashland Band in their bright uniforms, Co. D, O. N. G., in command of Lieut, Gillette, and Cadet Co. A, commanded by Capt. Blaine Klum, Buraside Poet and Relief Corps of Ashland, Chester Arthur Post of Medford and other G. A. R. folks were lined up to greet the visitors while the piece of light artillery stationed just across the track from the depot boomed a half dozen welcomes. The march was taken up to the encampment grounds at the pleasant Chautauqua grove which has since been a seene of life and activity with its half a hundred tents or more laid out in military style. A tall flagstaff from whose top floats "Old Glory" is in the center of the grounds and all around there is an air of military camp is followed and each day has heard its sunrise and sunset guns, its morning sick calls, roll calls, dress parades and reviews. The program was carried out with satisfaction. The vocal solo by Mrs. McClunie was rendered in her excellent style, the great throng joining in the chorus of "Marching Through Georgia."

The solo was followed by Miss Gertie Engle in an excellently rendered recitation. Perhaps the auditorium has not resounded with heartier applause than that given to this little artiste, nor would they be satisfied until she appeared again in another most laughable recitation.

The camp fire talk was opened by Department Commander Ethan Allen in a very interesting talk of forty minutes, followed by Hon. Ira Wakefield with his inimitable mixing of narrative, history and humor, into which was crowded some political suggestions. Mr. C. B. Watson was called but excused himself. Captain I. D. So well pleased were the audichect that Mr. Dunlap had to sing again and brought the house down. Commander Axtell then treated the people to a couple of solos, accompanying himself on the violin. Rev. McLean was then called and gave some amusing anecdotes of his army experience. Mr. McLean is always interesting and slides into veins of humor that seem to be a part of his nature and discoursed as he does it, his humor is in the highest degree enjoyable. At intervals during the exercises the people were charmed with those delightful musical treats characteristic of the Ashland band which is the pride of every citizen of Ashland and the admiration of all visitives. VETERANS IN ATTENDANCE.

The following is a list of old soldiers and sailors in attendance at the fourth annual reunion as taken from the asso ciation register. In the list will be found veteran volunteers from many states who in this au-tumn month of 1895 find themselves gathered together here in Ashland in pleasant reunion for a general social time and the rehearsal of the events of history. Scattered through the list are many who have seen more than ordinary service in the defense of our country and our flag generals, colonels, captains, privates, who have endured the hardships of forced marches or have seen battle at sea, who have helped win glorious victories or perhaps suffered defeat made sacred by the cause—some have gone through the dire agomes of prison life and carry its marks with them. But it is sufficient to say that all had honorable careers in a noble cause. It is pleasing and inspiring to a younger generation to see them gather together in annual renewal of comredeship, to wear the blue and to escort passed between the lines and the veterans saluted the commander as his comradeship, to wear the blue and to march and form in martial array. Bitter animosities have passed away and the old soldiers in their reunions furnish us with a valuable lesson in patriotism and unity. Long may they live to do so.
