CHANGE OF ROUTE.

Coos Bay Line Inactive South of Wind Creek Tunnel.

Marshfield, Ore.—The Evening Record says:

It may be taken for a certainty now that the Southern Pacific will build no railroad this side of the Wind creek tunnel this season. Information has reached the Record that implies the first story about work being stopped for the present was the correct version of the affair, and the talk of changing grade seems to have had more than a grain of truth in it. Locating Engineer Brown has been on the bay since last Friday and it is known he is consulting with local employes of the Southern Pacific. The MacArthur-Perks people cannot go ahead with the work they had planned, and therefore are about to remove their headquarters to Eugene.

Parties who have received copies of the Congressional Record up to a very late date find no reference whatever to any attempt on the part of any railroad company to obtain consent of congress to cross Coos bay with a bridge, and the records are complete to the first part of last week.

A leak has occurred which has it that the location of the line between Gardiner and the bay will undergo several important changes in the final survey for the railroad, two of which are changes on North inlet to avoid two drawbridges which the present plans call for. This will mean putting the line through from the Resin place on the west side of the inlet to the bay, without any crossings where drawbridges must be maintained.

This seems to be the secret of the whole matter. The grades and locations must be changed, and the company is not ready to say just where the lines will be run, and therefore there is no work here for the MacArthur-Perks people until they are completed. All the talk about grades being washed away and deteriorating is passed by with whatever credit it deserves, for it is a sure thing that a grade which has been made and settled for a year or more is much more suitable than a fresh one just finished by contractors.

FUGITIVE FUND EXHAUSTED.

State Will Have to Make New Appropriation.

Unless provision is made by state or county within a week, persons accused of crimes ranging from vagrancy to first degree murder will be able to escape the police immediately upon leaving the city, as the result of a conference between Secretary of State Olcott and Detective Captain Baty.

While a fugitive fund exists, it is not large enough to provide for the expense of catching criminals who seek refuge in other cities. County Judge Cleeton and Commissioners Lightner and Hart recently refused to put out further county funds, to be replaced later by state funds, unless the state would guarantee the return of the funds.

This the state through Olcott refuses to do. The tangle has been on the verge of becoming intricate for some time, but the efforts of the police department to collect the amounts spent in the chase of W. A. Tanner and Hazel Irwin, accused of the murder of Ray W. Wallace, precipitated the confusion. The amount was $46.15.

It has been the custom of the police to pay the expenses of capturing and taking criminals to Portland to face trial, later getting reimbursement from the county, which in turn was repaid by the state.

According to Captain Baty, Secretary Olcott will not allow further state funds to be spent for the capture of criminals until the appointment of a state agent. The agent fund has not been arranged and the matter will have to be presented to the legislature. Chief Slover of Portland holds that in the meantime criminals will "make monkeys" out of the local police.

"RUSTY LEAF" NO INJURY.

Prof. O'Gara Tells of Nature of Fruit Mite.

A number of pear growers have become more or less anxious over the condition of some of their pear trees on account of the peculiar appearance of the terminal leaves, said Prof. O'Gara recently. "In most cases the Bartlett pear shows the greatest injury, although it is more or less prevalent on other varieties. The injury is by no means serious, especially in the case of vigorous trees, but it is well for pear growers to know what to do in case the trouble should become serious.

"The foliage has a peculiar 'rusty' or 'russet' appearance, and is also somewhat curled as though by drought. The browning or russetting is mostly on the under surface of the foliage, and, as a rule, the twig itself has the same appearance. In some cases the fruit also shows a slight russet. Many have mistaken this trouble for sunburn or tip-burn, but the two troubles are very different. Sunburn or tip-burn causes a peculiar drying of the tip and margin of the leaf, making it brittle. However, in the 'rusty leaf' the foliage does not become brittle, but loses its gloss, finally falling off, leaving the terminal bare.

"The cause of 'rusty leaf' is due to the presence of a very small mite of the genus Phytotus, and is related to the blister mite. I have seen as many as 10,000 mites on a single pear leaf, but the number is often much greater. However, unlike the blister mite, it does not produce small galls or blisters. It works wholly on the surface of the leaf and does not enter it. In fact, its action is very much like the rust mite of the orange and lemon in the south. For a number of years the effect of the rust mite in the citrus districts of California was ascribed to a fungus disease, and the same thing has been said of the 'rusty leaf' of the pear in this valley. This is a serious mistake, and simply shows a lack of knowledge and observation. In a paper to be published later a complete description of this mite will be given. The mites are related to the spiders and are not insects, but near relatives of them.

"Where the 'rusty leaf' mite becomes serious, self-boiled lime-sulphur, or even dry sulphur, may be used. Tobacco sprays, oil emulsions, etc., are also effective. Unless the attack is very general, no great amount of damage is done. The injury is confined largely to the terminals as the mites like the juices of the fresh young leaves. Where young trees are attacked, it is more often necessary to spray than in the case of bearing trees. Naturally, if there is any indication that the fruit will be russeted, spraying should be done. Where the fruit is nearing maturity, it is best not to use any spray which will discolor or spot it."

FORMER ASCENSIONS RELATED.

Two Parties Asserted to Have Reached Summit in 1910.

Seattle.—The failure of the Parker-Browne Mount McKinley expedition recalls the fact that this was the third ascent of the Alaskan peak, two parties having reached the summit in 1910, when the discussion over Dr. Frederick A. Cook's claim of having scaled the mountain was at its height. The first ascent was accomplished April 3, 1910, by a party of four, led by Thomas Lloyd of Fairbanks, Alaska. The Lloyd party attacked the mountain from the north side, starting from Fairbanks in the winter so as to reach the mountain before the snow began to melt. After the return of Lloyd the three other members of his party, Pete Anderson, W. R. Taylor and Charles McGonnigle, repeated the feat, reaching the summit May 17 of that year. An aneroid measurement taken by Lloyd placed the height of the peak at 20,590 feet.

In the summer of 1910 two other parties, one led by C. E. Rusk of Chelan, Wash., and the other by Professor Parker and Mr. Browne, attempted to ascend the mountain from the southwestern side, following the route over which Dr. Cooke claimed to have reached the summit. Both parties reported the mountain inaccessible from that side.

Professor Parker expressed doubt concerning the success reported by the Lloyd party, but this year decided to follow the course laid out by Lloyd and approached the peak from the north. The party left Seward, on the Alaska coast, early in February, and spent much time working around to the north side of the mountain.

Professor Parker was a member of the party Dr. Cook led to the mountain and was one of the first to dispute the Brooklyn physician's claim that he had reached the summit. With Professor Parker and Mr. Browne in the present expedition are Merl Lavey and Arthur Arden, packers.

A party sent out by the Fairbanks (Alaska) Times attempted to scale the mountain last spring, but was unsuccessful.

SITUATION ALARMING.

London Strikers Pray for Death of Devenport.

London.—Fearing that some zealot from the strikers' ranks may try to assassinate Lord Devenport, chairman of the port of London, as a result of the public prayers of 20,000 strikers on Tower Hill that "God strike Lord Devenport dead," 24 policemen are guarding Devenport's home here.

Hourly the suffering among the striking dockmen is growing. Hundreds of women and children are virtually starving, and with the growth of their distress the fear of the government increases that some bloody assassination may bring the trouble to a crisis where a settlement or some kind may be forced.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Ashland People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney troubles is that they so often get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health will be gradually undermined. Help the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills, which are so strongly recommended right here in this locality.

Mrs. George Bell, Washington street, Klamath Falls, Ore., says: "Some time ago I began to suffer from pains in my back, due to disordered kidneys.
