TREE IS NOVELTY.

Species of Greenland Fir Has Spread of 60 Feet.

Dauphin county, Pennsylvania, contains the only tree of its kind in the world, a species of Greenland fir, and although less than a foot high, the circumference of the space covered by its branches is 60 feet.

This tree is at least 200 years old, and from a short distance it appears to be simply a collection of small shrubs.

Horticulturists of the country who have heard of the phenomenon have made offers of substantial sums for the tree, with a view of removing it, roots and all, but these offers have been consistently refused. Aside from tree specialists and residents of the neighborhood, few persons have heard of the spreading tree.

In Greenland, its original home, the species never grows high and is little more than a shrub. In its natural surroundings it does not attain anywhere near the circumference of the one in Pennsylvania.
