REV. ANNA SHAW SPEAKS HERE

franchise would lift us up to the level of intelligent citizens.
"Is it unladylike to vote? No. Voting is the most ladylike way in the world to get things. Our present methods of lobbying and buttonholing legislators is unladylike. I've done it and never was more ashamed of anything in my life. We are forced to use this method, because we haven't the ballot. For twenty years I worked in this way to secure for women the right to own their own children."
"The bad woman vote is a bugaboo that exists almost entirely in the imagination. The percentage of immoral women is so small as to be almost a negligible factor in politics, even if they all voted. But scarcely one of them vote when they have the privilege. This is largely because they almost never fall so low as to be willing to drag their relatives down by registering in their own name and giving the name of their parents and birthplace. Furthermore, they seldom live long enough in one place to qualify as voters. A ward boss in Denver once forced some of these unfortunate women to vote and was given nine months in prison, which effectually discouraged that sort of thing."
"Four other states will vote on equal suffrage this year: Wisconsin, Michigan, Arizona and Kansas. After the election there will be a monster parade in New York city to celebrate the victories of the cause. Already 5,000 torches have been ordered from France. It is expected that 10,000 men will be in line, and that half a million spectators will view the parade. There will be beautiful chorists representing each state where the cause has won. It will be a splendid advertisement for those states, not only at that parade but in the celebrations which will be held in various European cities. If Oregon loses this opportunity it will never come again, because in two years more equal suffrage victories will be too common to occasion much comment. But we will never give up the fight. The cat won't be in it with us compared to the way we will come back, so the men of Oregon might as well be resigned to the inevitable and settle the matter right in this campaign."
O. H. BARNHILL.

ASHLAND HIGH SCHOOL

Personal Notes That Tell of Activities in the Realm of the Three R's.

Two new students, Ralph Harris and Adrian Wolf, entered school last week.
The students are awaiting the distribution of report cards today with fear and trembling.
Otto Klum, '12, is trying for quarterback at O. A. C., and seems to have good prospects of making the team.
A new three-horsepower motor is being installed in the basement to run the saw, grindstone, etc., for the manual training work.
The much-belated returns of the student body election show that Ruth Whitney was elected editor-in-chief of the Annual, Kenneth Lily freshman vice-president, and Alvin Wheeler cheer-leader.
Don Walker has dropped out of school and is now with Jan Mowat, '12, surveying a logging road in northern California. He is intending to take the teachers' examination next month and secure a school.
Physics apparatus for the year amounting to about $80 was received a few days ago, giving this department plenty of equipment to do effective work. The chemicals and apparatus for the chemistry department are expected any day.
The teachers' room is being fitted up as a rest room for the lady teachers and the girls. The domestic science department is making curtains for the windows and the manual training department is making screens to place in front of the doors.
Walker Throne, '12, has been elected president of the freshman class in the University of Washington. This is a great honor as the class numbers about 800. Mr. Throne was one of last year's debaters and doubtless gained this distinction through his gift of gab.
On Saturday evening an agricultural club was formed at the high school. Its object is the discussion of agricultural problems, and the arousing of interest in farm and country life. Membership is not restricted to high school students, but everybody is invited to the meetings and urged to join the society.
Pay day arrived Friday just in time to save the faculty from famine. One teacher remarked a week ago that he only had a nickel left in his pocket; another has been bunning his landlady for spending money, while a third has been dining out to save board bill. And so on ad infinitum. Verily the summer vacation is long and paydays pitifully few.
Interest in debating received quite an impetus when the question for the southern Oregon district of the State Debating League was received. This question, which will also be used in the tryouts, is: "Resolved, that life imprisonment, with restricted power of pardon, is a desirable substitute for capital punishment in Oregon." Work will begin on this question at once. The series of tryouts will be held as soon as possible in order that the debaters chosen may have ample time to prepare for their contests.
The football team had a hard week's practice and some of the boys are bruised up pretty badly, but the hard work is bringing them into shape. Mr. Butterfield, the coach, says that the team is ready for a contest at any time, as they have most of the formations and plays that will be used during the year already worked out. More than two full teams are getting out every night and competition is keen for the various places. Brick Moody, full-back, is out of the game with a bad leg, but will probably be out for practice this evening. So far only the games with the local high schools are sure, and even Medford and Grants Pass are having a hard time to get out men enough for the teams. Manager Linn Mowat is trying to get enough games to the north to justify a trip Thanksgiving week. Three games would be necessary to meet expenses. He is negotiating for games with Roseburg, Eugene and Albany. The prospects of such a trip would do much to put life into the boys and keep out a large squad for practice.
The reception given by the Young People's Union of the city on Friday night was a brilliant success. The armory was crowded with laughing, chattering high school girls and bashful high school boys. Some members of the faculty also unbent enough to join in the childish revels. The object of the meeting, to get people acquainted, was accomplished by giving each person twenty subjects for conversation, each to furnish the topic for a three-minute talk. It was ladies' choice and the girls were not bashful. The formal program was much enjoyed. Mr. John Rigg, in a very graceful speech, bade the visitors welcome in the name of the young people's societies. The other numbers were a vocal solo by Frances Hamlin, a piano duet by the Misses Dougherty, a reading by Mrs. Shaw, and a vocal solo by Mrs. Ashcraft. The chief event of the evening, however, was a contest in which Professor Coen, Professor Manion and Alvin Wheeler tried to see which could tell the biggest yarn. As from constant use, Professor Coen's stock of stories had run low, the contest lay between the other two. Honors were almost even, but it was generally conceded that Mr. Wheeler had it over the pedagogues.
Ladies, save money by having your old furs remodeled into new and up-to-date style. If your furs are out of date there is no need of buying a new set. Properly remodeled furs look like new. Now is the time to have such work done before our busy season commences, then when cold weather comes they will be ready for you. Natural Science Est., 10 Granite street. 38-4t

THE SCIENCE OF FARMING.

If the world's attention determines the importance of a science, the science of farming is receiving deserved recognition. For the world is certainly giving much attention to the farm and the people who work upon it.
This is not to be wondered at, for upon the farm and its products depend all other industries. Without this science all other things must fall, whereas the farmer could, if necessary, make a fairly good shift at doing without all the rest.
Knowing how is just as valuable on the farm as in any other branch of industry. The subject of dry farming is an illustration very much in point. One man experimented until he learned the secret, and as a result many people have profited. That he learned does not seem very wonderful, but it was the thing needed to be known, and in the semi-arid west, where crops are being grown by his method, they deem it quite an achievement. It always pays to study ones business.—Pine Valley Herald.
Some of the most valuable courses, for those interested in dry farming, at the Oregon Agricultural College are those in the agronomy department, in which soils, field crops, irrigation and drainage, farm mechanics and farm management are considered. In each class, besides the class room and laboratory work, the students are given actual field practice. Experimental crops are grown under various soil and climatic conditions, and the work of the different experiment stations and demonstration farms in dry farming regions is discussed in detail.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING TO TIDINGS READERS.

(By Ralph Kaye.)

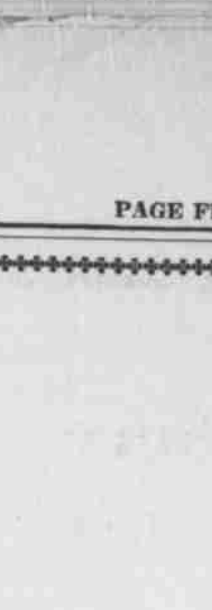

Remember that the Tidings want ads bring results.
Every time you advertise, whether in the newspapers, magazines, billboards, street cars or by word of mouth, you give to the public a promise to give a certain commodity or render a certain service for a given consideration. We bet the business man who does not live up to his published promises. The public takes his statements on faith and believes he will live up to them. If he does make good his promises, he has secured an asset of inestimable value which nobody can take from him—confidence—public confidence. Confidence in his goods, his store, his business policy—confidence in himself. But if he does not make good, he is worse off many times than the sudden ending of bankruptcy. Oblivion is merciful. In time he becomes a derelict drifting in the waters of business strangulation—a business leper who will suffer a living death—and not notice his disfigurement as he sinks deeper and deeper into the mire and quicksands of public disgust and mistrust, from where none ever return or care to.
