Colonel Charles W. Thatcher, an enthusiast over the better roads movement, heralds his approach into this territory by announcing from Klamath Falls that he will be in Ashland on Wednesday of this week, October 24, at 2 o'clock p. m. He will remain here but one hour, and inasmuch as his time is limited, he wants to employ it to best advantage. He is especially interested in the Yellowstone Boulevard from New York to San Francisco, claiming that about 3,000 miles of this highway is already well improved. Colonel Thatcher will also further exploit the "See America First" movement claiming that the improved highway is the greatest incentive to tourist travel.

Colonel Thatcher is now en route in this direction from over in the Klamath country, where, according to the papers there, he has been creating great enthusiasm over the good roads problem. When time permits he plans to address the pupils of the schools, devoting remarks principally to an effort in instilling the spirit of civic pride into the hearts of the rising generations.

No place has been designated for holding this meeting, it depending on circumstances, but if weather permits, Colonel Thatcher will probably address his hearers from the Plaza. There is no charge whatever for his services, he claiming that he is preaching the gospel of good roads for the great interest he is taking in the movement, and he wishes to place every phase of the work before the people of Oregon before the legislature meets this winter.
