STAGE HANDS.

From the Important Carpenter Down to the Lowly "Grip."
 To the outsider the term stage hand is applied to every one that works behind the footlights except the players, but there is quite an aristocratic line of demarcation.
 There are the stage carpenter and the assistant stage carpenter, who build scenery; there are the property man and the assistant property man, who make and shape all kinds of things out of papier mache for properties and look after the furniture and decorations of the stage; there are the fly men, who manipulate the ropes at the top of the theater, hoisting and lowering scenery and also raising and dropping the curtain. The natural habitat of these fly men is on platforms up in the flies, many feet above the stage, and when not otherwise employed they have the disconcerting habit of audibly gossiping and playing cards. Then there are the electrician and his assistants, whose business it is to operate the lights.
 The humblest of the regular staff is the "grip." This man handles scenery and does general utility work about the stage. When exigency demands the force is added to from the roustabouts who usually infest the stage entrance, eking out a miserable existence through casual jobs and "sponging" upon the members of the regular staff.—Mary Shaw in London Strand Magazine.

The Inevitable Comment.

A committee of investigating scientists approached a lady.
 "Madam," said Professor Prewins, the spokesman, offering her a magnificent chrysanthemum of rare and lovely hue—"madam, permit us to present this flower to you as a token of our high regard."
 She clasped the splendid blossom in her lily hand.
 Breathlessly the committee awaited her response.
 "How beautiful it is!" she answered.
 "What an exquisite shade of purple! I should love to have a dress of that color."
 Dr. Prewins nodded knowingly to the committee, as if to say, "I told you so."
 The committee winked at the professor and whispered, "You win!"—Newark News.

DO FLYING FISH FLY?

Science Thinks Not, but Many Observers Say They Do.
 The much mooted question, "Do flying fish fly?" is discussed by William Allingham in the Nautical Magazine. The orthodox scientific opinion is that the "wings" of the flying fish merely serve as a parachute to sustain the fish for a brief period in the air after he has launched himself out of the water by a powerful screwlike movement of his tail. According to this view, the fish has no power of directing his flight after he has left the water.
 However, Mr. Allingham, who is a nautical expert attached to the British meteorological office and is in constant intercourse with seamen, reports many observations that tend to controvert this opinion. Certain observers claim that the wing fins are in constant rapid vibration and seem actually to serve the purpose of flight. One vessel master watched a fish that had attained an altitude of twenty feet above the water and was flying toward the mizzen rigging of his ship when, apparently noticing obstruction, it changed its course about 60 degrees, crossing the vessel's stern to regain the water. Many other similar observations are mentioned.
 A series of cinematograph pictures might solve this question once and for all.—Scientific American.

The Turk in Constantinople.

Terrible scenes were witnessed in Constantinople when Mohammed II. captured the city in 1453. When the conquerors entered they slew 2,000 and made slaves of all who took refuge in the sanctuary of St. Sophia. Gibbon records the fate of the 60,000 prisoners: "Male captives were bound with cords, the females with their veils and girdles. The senators were linked with their slaves, the prelates with the porters of the church and young men of a plebeian class with noble maids whose faces had been invisible to the sun and their nearest kindred, and in this common state of captivity the ranks of society were confounded, the ties of nature were cut asunder, and the inexorable soldier was careless of the father's groans, the tears of the mother and the lamentations of the children."
Trials of Wealth.
 "Wealth doesn't always bring happiness," remarked the youngster with the large spectacles.
 "Naw," asserted the other kid. "Look at me cousin yonder. He's got 2 cents, and he can't decide between lollipops and ice cream."—Pittsburgh Post.

No Help.
 "I admit that the architecture of this house is something fierce," said the agent, "but just see how handy the place is—only a stone's throw from the station."
 "I see it is," said Tomkins wearily. "but I'm such a rotten shot it wouldn't be any satisfaction to me."—Harper's Weekly.

Bit of a Wag.
 "I've bought a bulldog," said Parsniff to his friend Lessup, "and I want a motto to put over his kennel. Can you think of something?"
 "Why not use a dentist's sign, 'Teeth inserted here?'" suggested Lessup.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
