24,000 GALS. VINEGAR

Bagley Canning Company Completes Work of Manufacturing Crop of 1912—Buildings Rushed.

The Bagley Canning Company has just completed its vinegar run for the season. It has over 24,000 gallons at present in its storage tanks and can turn out vinegar in a short time now.

The addition to the cook room is now practically completed and a force of carpenters is at work on the warehouse. The cannery will be shut down until cherries and berries are ready.

COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

Wilson Proposes to Displace Dollar Diplomacy.

Washington, May 5.—President Wilson proposes to make the department of commerce a substitute for dollar diplomacy. He intends to broaden its scope, develop American trade abroad and remove suspicions that the department is a political adjunct.

Governor Johnson of California has informed the president that he will not sign the bill until May 12, and the president expects to wire his attitude to the governor immediately after Secretary Bryan arrives in Washington.

Japan has not formally protested against the land bill, but it is expected such action will be taken soon. The administration will not reply to Japan's representations until Bryan returns.

President Wilson is still conferring with the house and senate currency committee regarding a currency reform bill.

Reports that certain democratic and republican senators have succeeded in getting sufficient votes to put a duty on wool and to eliminate the free sugar clause of the tariff bill are not disturbing President Wilson. He does not believe they have a chance to succeed.

TWO ADOPT COMMISSION

Portland and Pasadena Adopt Commission Government in Their New Charters Last Week.

Portland, Ore., May 5.—The city has emerged from the throes of one political campaign only to be thrust in the midst of another.

When the commission form of government was adopted at Saturday's election it made necessary the election of a mayor and four commissioners. Those who were nominated for office under the old form of government had their efforts nullified by the adoption of the charter amendment.

A number of candidates had their petitions of candidacy ready to be filed Saturday night as soon as the result of the election was definitely known, and others were out bright and early today securing certificates that will entitle them to run. To qualify to run for the elective offices a candidate must secure 100 nominating certificates signed by bona fide voters.

All the candidates for mayor nominated under the direct primary have signified their intention of running for mayor under the commission form. They are A. G. Rushlight, republican, incumbent; H. R. Albee, progressive, and C. L. McKenna, democrat.

Under the commission form there are but six elective offices: a mayor, whose salary is fixed at $6,000; four commissioners at $5,000 and an auditor at not less than $3,600.

Pasadena, Cal., May 5.—Sharp at 12 o'clock today Mayor Thurm handed over the job of running the city of Pasadena to T. R. Metcalf and his four fellow commissioners, and this city, the first in California to adopt the commission form of government originated in Des Moines, was under the new management. The idea of this new plan is the application to municipal affairs of the practices of every-day business. Instead of a city council, meeting once a week, composed of men who devote most of their time and energy to other interests, there is a commission of five men who are paid $3,000 a year each and required to devote all their time to the city's affairs.

CENTRAL POINT WINS

Took Ball Game From Talent Team Sunday Afternoon by a Score of 6 to 2.

The Talent baseball team went to defeat Sunday on the Central Point grounds at the hands of the Central Point team. The game was a good one except in one inning, when a bunch of errors and rank decisions were responsible for three of the Central Point scores. The Talent team is preparing seats for its grounds and expects to have some return games soon.

How to Drive a Bad Thought Out of the Mind.

In the May Woman's Home Companion, Ralph Waldo Trine writes a very practical and interesting article on "The Mental Law of Habit." It is an article full of suggestions about habit forming and habit breaking. Following is an extract:

"In the matter of breaking away from a habit already formed, especially if one is for the time being under the domination, as we say, of that habit, mental or physical, it is many times very difficult to keep the thought or the recurrence of the thought out of the mind. The one safe rule of action, or the course of action that makes the accomplishment easier, is, as quickly as the undesirable thought presents itself, to put it out of the mind instantly; dalliance with it, and thereby allowing it to assume larger proportions, makes it continually harder to check it. That which at first is but a tiny flame will grow, if we act too tardily, into one of consuming proportions; and we will find ourselves under its domination again."

"Fortunately there is a fact which, if we once fully understand it, will be of tremendous aid at this particular point. It might be called a 'Law of Indirectness,' or a 'Law of Substitution.' To get rid of an undesirable thought it is easier to put into the mind some other object of thought which will replace the undesirable one than to tussle with it and endeavor to put it out directly. So when it presents itself again, instantly to throw the mind along some other line, the opposite of the undesirable one, or along any line that it will follow most easily and naturally, will enable it to be freed from the undesirable one, which will gradually decrease in its power, thereby gradually losing its hold, while the mind is growing continually along the lines of more effective self-control. It is simply shutting out objectionable and undesirable thoughts and putting desirable, any desirable ones, in their place. If this course is persisted in the undesirable loses its hold and disappears in time completely."

The Janitor and the Peanuts. Earl Godwin, who writes human-interest stuff for several newspapers, went to the Department of Agriculture in Washington one day, and secured a peck of diseased peanuts. The scientists in the department were having a hot argument as to whether or not the peanuts if eaten, would kill a human being, and Godwin took the eatables to his office to have them photographed. He saw a big story in the fact that the high-browed scientific men could not tell when a peanut was fatal.

The next morning when he entered his office he found that the whole peck was gone. He instituted a search, and finally discovered that the colored janitor had stolen and eaten the peanuts.

After keeping the janitor under observation for three days, and seeing that he neither pecked nor pined, Godwin abandoned his story and wrote to the department: "Quit arguing. The peanuts are harmless."—The Popular Magazine.

No Fishing.

The Sunday school was being questioned about Noah and his voyage in the ark. "Now," said the teacher, "what do you children think Noah did while he was in the ark with all those animals? How did he pass the time?" "Praying," suggested little Nellie. "Fishing," thought Harry. "Huh!" snorted Willie, who sat beside him. "T'would be fine fishing with only two worms, wouldn't it?"—Metropolitan Magazine.

A Tight Place.

Colgate Hoyt, Jr., at a dinner in New York told, apropos of Washington's birthday, a story about Washington. "When Colonel Lee," he said, "was getting up a subscription for a monument to the Pater Patraie, he called on a certain rich man. "But the rich man refused to subscribe. "'No, sir,' said he. 'I see no necessity for a monument to Washington. His fame is undying, sir. He is enshrined in the hearts of all his countrymen.' "'Is he enshrined in your heart?' asked Colonel Lee. "'He is, sir.' "'Then all I have to say,' replied the colonel, 'is that he is in a tight place.'"
