Dr. Bertha Stuart On Girl Life

Dr. Bertha Stuart of the University of Oregon delivered a lecture Tuesday night at the public library in Medford, on "The Young Woman's Physical Development," in which she called attention to the urgent need of developing a new type of femininity, which would be physically and mentally equipped for service and usefulness in the workaday world.

In the opinion of the speaker, style and senseless convention had first by shielding and restricting the girl in childhood, and preventing a normal physical development, then by keeping from her knowledge of herself, physical laws and truths, so distorted the normal feminine type that if the tendency were not checked dire consequences would result.

One of the great mistakes at present the speaker considered was the lack of fresh air and exercise for girls so that their circulation, heart, lung and digestive organs could be allowed to develop properly. Another need was fresh air in schools, games for girls, and the instruction of parents of the fundamental laws of reproduction through persistent and wholesome nature study, not now and then, or here and there, but everywhere all the time. Parents, she said, even if not highly educated could by reference books keep sufficiently far ahead of their children to be of inestimable service.

In conclusion Dr. Stuart defined the three cardinal needs for the modern American girls to be (1) a sounder physical organism; (2) sounder and more compelling mental interest; (3) instruction of the laws of sex in early childhood in an intelligent and rational fashion.

Lowe Gives His Chicago Lecture

Grants Pass Courier: D. M. Lowe the southern Oregon booster who has recently returned from a six weeks trip to the land show at Chicago and at various other points where he delivered lectures upon the Oregon country, gave the lecture Monday evening at the regular meeting of the Commercial Club, a small but enthusiastic audience of ladies and gentlemen being present. A rainy night was responsible for the small attendance. The lecture was illustrated by about one hundred colored lantern slides, showing southern Oregon scenes and horticultural and agricultural subjects. This lecture was delivered by Mr. Lowe 142 times throughout the east and aroused great enthusiasm for this portion of the west, as did also the magnificent display of which he had charge at the land show.

A Tribute to Andrew McCallen

The Lakeview Examiner contained the following sketch of the late Andrew McCallen, who formerly lived there and who died recently at Oakland, California:

After a lingering illness, due to an attack of bronchitis, Andrew McCallen, a former pioneer resident of Lake county, died last Saturday at his home in Berkeley, California. Death came just after he had finished breakfast at about nine o'clock in the morning. The deceased seemed in the best of spirits at the table and freely discussed various local happenings. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at two o'clock, the remains being cremated.

Andrew McCallen was born in Elizabethtown, Illinois, September fifteenth, 1848, being at the time of death sixty-five years, three months and twelve days of age. His paternal grandfather, Hayes McCallen, was born and bred in Scotland. His father, Andy McCallen Senior, was a native of Indiana and after being admitted to the bar settled in Shawneetown, Illinois, where he continued the practice of his profession and filled important public positions, being associated in important legal cases with Abraham Lincoln.

Obtaining his early education in the public schools of Shawneetown, Andrew McCallen Junior began learning the drug business when sixteen years old. He subsequently entered Bryant and Stratton's Business College in Chicago, and after his graduation was employed as bookkeeper for a Chicago manufacturing firm. Returning then to Shawneetown, Mr. McCallen opened a drug store, which he carried on until the spring of 1875. Disposing of his stock at that time he came to Modoc county, California, where he was employed as clerk and bookkeeper for eighteen months. In the fall of 1876 when Lakeview was in its infancy he came here as manager of the merchandise store belonging to A. and C. U. Snider, a position that he retained eleven years. In the meantime he made wise investments, becoming a large land owner and a man of prominence. In 1887, in company with C. A. Cogswell and others, he organized the Lakeview Bank, which is now conducted as the Bank of Lakeview. P. G. Christman was made president of the institution, W. B. Whitmore vice-president and Mr. McCallen cashier. The bank was sold in 1898 and two years following he removed to Ashland, where in 1901 he assisted in organizing the First National Bank of Ashland, which was opened with Mr. McCallen as cashier, he later being made president of the bank, which office he held until the time of his death.

While living in Modoc county Mr. McCallen in 1879 was married to Miss Josephine Applegate, to which union six children were born, five of whom with their mother survive his death.

As a business man Andrew McCallen had been fortunate and acquired a large amount of valuable real estate, being the owner of several farms in this county as well as city property in Lakeview. In 1904 he helped to organize the First National Bank of Lakeview, being at the time a director and stockholder in the bank. He yet retained his interest as stockholder in the institution.

Politically he was an active member of the democratic party, having filled offices of trust and responsibility. In the fall of 1878, when the county seat was removed from Linkville to Lakeview, Mr. McCallen was appointed county treasurer, and served for eighteen consecutive years. For one year he served as councilman of this city, and for one term filled the mayor's chair. Fraternally he was a member of Lakeview Lodge No. 63, I. O. O. F., later being transferred to the Ashland lodge. He was also a charter member of Lakeview Encampment No. 18.

The death of Andrew McCallen removes another of the commanding figures which during his career had always been conspicuous and at times dominating in the public affairs of the entire southern portion of this state, and the news of his death will carry a severe shock to his multitude of friends and acquaintances.

Asks Assistance Of Newspapers

Attorney John C. Veatch of Portland was in Ashland a few days ago sounding the newspapers of southern Oregon on the proposition of a campaign to bring the University of Oregon nearer the people of the state of Oregon. Mr. Veatch says the university has a lot of big men on the faculty and their work is being carried on among the students and occasionally bound in bulletins written in technical language and carry small circulation. Mr. Veatch's idea is to have this valuable reservoir of useful and practical information tapped so that it will be of service to the mass of the people of Oregon as well as the few that are reached by it, and to bring this about Mr. Veatch proposes that this information be put into newspaper language and given circulation through the newspapers of the rural sections of Oregon through the co-operation of the publishers as to the most feasible means of bringing this about. The carrying out of this policy would be of inestimable service to the people since the research work of the university would enable the people to interest themselves extensively with the many political and economic issues the people must handle continuously under our Oregon system as well as the sources of valuable information of a practical nature an institution of that kind would contribute.

Mr. Veatch was one of the organizers of the Oregon Citizens' Educa-national League, the purpose of which is to interest the people in the investigation and study of our educational institutions, and Mr. Veatch believes this is one of the means well worth the time of the university and the newspaper publishers.
