Klamath Falls Strong for Boosting

"It was some booster meeting."

This is the way Secretary Lewis Wyld of the Klamath Chamber of Commerce spoke of the big tri-county meeting held in Medford Tuesday night, says the Northwestern. Mr. Wyld, A. A. Bellman, Percy Evans and Fred Houston returned last night from this gathering. The others remained to look after business and visit in the Rogue river town.

That it was the greatest booster meeting ever held in southern Oregon is the unanimous verdict of the four returning delegates out of the fifteen who went from here.

"Everybody was enthused with the booster spirit and the result of this gathering will be worth many dollars to this entire section of the state," said Secretary Wyld. "It was the general feeling that Klamath, Jackson and Josephine should get together in a general plan of boosting the scenic beauties of the country, and instead of each community working for its own selfish ends, all communities will work in the future for the joint community interests. In this way it is believed a great good will be accomplished for the entire country. One of the objects of the combination spirit is to boost Crater Lake by every possible means and the tourist travel to it and the other scenic beauties of southern Oregon."

Mr. Wyld said a large delegation from that part of the country is expected to come here early in June, when delegates from each publicity body will get together with a view to mapping out further plans for the work started at the Medford meeting. The plan as now outlined is to form a league of some sort with the sections to be benefited represented by the best booster talent to be found, this league to work in harmony and co-operation toward boosting tourist travel into Klamath, Jackson and Josephine counties.

Federation Officers Elected for Year

Mrs. E. E. McKibben of Grants Pass will head the Southern Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs for the coming year, she having been elected president of the organization at the business session held Thursday. Other officers elected were as follows: First vice-president, Mrs. Fuller; second vice-president, Mrs. Gilmore; recording secretary, Miss Towne; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Cora Henkle; treasurer, Mrs. Schiefelin; auditor, Mrs. Frank Smith; district organizer, Mrs. Gard.

Chairmen of the departments of work were elected as follows: Art, Mrs. Arthur Conklin; conservation, Mrs. L. M. Boot; civics, Mrs. J. F. Reddy; education, Mrs. W. W. Usher; household economics, Mrs. C. L. Hobart; legislation, Mrs. C. L. Cleverger; library, Mrs. Joseph Moss; music, Mrs. E. H. Anderson; press, Mrs. Sexsmith; public health, Mrs. H. S. Mullt.

Many resolutions were passed before final adjournment, and among them a motion declaring the purpose and ideals of the convention as standing for temperance, law enforcement and general uplift work.

Grandma Emery Died Saturday

Mrs. Sophia Emery, or Grandma Emery, as she is familiarly known to her intimate friends, died Saturday at the home of her adopted daughter, Mrs. James Davis, at Polo. She was one of the early pioneers of Oregon, coming here in 1853. Her husband, Eber Emery, whose death occurred twenty years ago, was one of the men who gave Ashland its name. He also built the old Ashland House.

Mrs. Emery had no children of her own, but adopted two, Mrs. James Davis and H. S. Emery. She was ninety-five years and two months old. The funeral service was held today at 3 o'clock at Central Point, where she was laid to rest by the side of her husband. She was the oldest living Rebekah in the state.

Already Planning To Visit Springs

some very sharp curves where the bed will be widened out to a point of safety.

As we went along we came to the concrete mixer. This is a little out of the ordinary. The engineer sits in his little room among his levers, he pulls one and the machine backs up a few feet, another lever and the coarse concrete comes forth and men spread it out, and another lever and the surfacing comes forth. No wheelbarrows, no long distances, the men standing beside the machine and shoveling, as everything is within reach. The haul is done by a big road engine which hauls a carload at a trip.

The mixer and its crew of men complete 350 feet of paving a day. That is not the average to date, but it has been done. Like a heavy freight, it does not go a mile a minute as soon as ordered, but it takes time to get it in motion.

On leaving the mixer behind we proceeded to ride over the new road, and it was no fun at all. It is covered with about two inches of sand and one man is kept busy with a hose keeping the sand wet so the cement sets under dampness, which keeps it from cracking. Every 50 feet strips of tar paper are put across the roadbed, which divide it into blocks, and this allows for expansion, and in case of damage one block can be replaced without disturbing the rest. The sand will be removed when the cement is thoroughly hardened.

It is well worth one's while to go over the road and see what is being done.

We arrived at home about 3 p. m., perfectly willing to put the wheel into our back room and let it stay there for several days.

Our Optical Outfit Twenty Years Ago was 60 pairs of lenses, all one size, all flat, none for rimless, none for eyeglasses.

It was enough then. Times are different now. Optical science has progressed. To meet present demands we have now more than 25 times as many lenses, in four sizes, for rimless and inserted, flat and deep toric.

We have contracted for and have on the way a complete set of edge-grinding, cutting and drilling machines, as well as a much greater stock of rough lenses, whereby prescriptions can be filled the same day, whether torics, compounds or simple spheres, big or little.

This added convenience, together with our constantly growing practice, bringing increased skill, should appeal to those who visit out-of-town opticians at considerable expense of time and money, of whom we ask a visit and trial. H. L. WHITED, 98-2t Registered Optometrist.
