By J. F. Rocho.

From the tragical point we related in our last we went to the American Falls, King's Palace, the Queen's Dining Room with table set for the invited guests (who never appeared), through a narrow passageway to Paradise Alley. Should this be the real road to paradise, I venture to say very many would turn back, looking for a better and more convenient way of reaching same. You go on all fours for some distance, not minding sore shins and sore heads, on to Grandma's Teakettle, down Satan's Toboggan Slide, which landed us at the feet of old Satan himself; next Niagara Falls, Green River Falls, Queen's Throne, and the three Seneca lakes (which are little beauties to behold), back to the Bacon Room with its slabs of bacon piled up for years of famine or for supplying the allied forces, whose stock will soon be exhausted. After passing Satan's Hitching Post we landed in the Queen's Reception Room. Next came the Fat Man's Grief, which certainly exhausted all our strength getting through the same to Joaquin Miller's Chappel, Apple Tower, Washington's Monument, Lake Michigan, Mt. Shasta, Garden of the Gods, with its Brussels carpet, up the Golden Stairs (a fifty-foot ladder) to Bridal Veil Falls and Cascades, Dante's Inferno, Bridal Veil Chamber with Seven Sisters, through into the Ghost Chamber, with fear and trembling. We anxiously waited and watched for the unknown to appear, but it proved the same as all ghost stories and we were very much disappointed. This is the largest room in the cave, some 520 feet long, 80 feet wide and 40 feet high. At one end is the Kancadee Dance Hall. From this point it is possible to go one-half mile farther in through a narrow passage or crevice (too small for your humble servant with his 220 pounds of avoidupois to venture into), but took another course to Paradise Lost. The Shower Room is at this point. You are five-eighths of a mile from the main upper entrance and we have now taken about a three and a half mile trip underground. You can reach the upper entrance by a short cut of five-eighths of a mile. The whole trip took up three and a half hours in traveling through these wonderful works of nature, the grandeur of which I can only faintly describe or tell; they must be seen to be appreciated.

I was informed that two Ashland boys last winter, when no guides were present, entered the caves and in many places marred their beauty by daubing the walls in many places with black paint. They are well known to the authorities and may yet pay the penalty for their evil doings.

The guides informed us that there was a lower entrance, recently explored by lowering a man down about two hundred feet with rope, that is claimed will excel anything now opened up, and can be made accessible by building about two hundred feet of ladders (zigzag), which will probably be done next season.

It is hoped that the government will put these caves into the national reserve. With a liberal appropriation these caves can be made one of the great wonders of the world for "beauty and grandeur." It is claimed they cannot be excelled by the famous caves of Kentucky. Grants Pass could, by taking this matter up with the Southern Pacific Company (out of the hands of a few "sports" who are out for graft), make this one of the greatest attractions for tourists from all over the world.

Through the kindness of our guide, R. W. Rowley, who is the most accommodating and pleasing entertainer one could wish to meet, everything was described in detail as you went along. The government could have made no better choice for a caretaker. After bidding our friend goodbye, he refusing all compensation for his kindness and bidding us come again, we started for camp. This was some six miles off, all the way a down-hill pull. We reached camp at dark, hungry and tired after such a strenuous day's work. Providing ourselves with a good supply of milk from a nearby ranch, we enjoyed a good bowl of milk and bread and retired for the night feeling well repaid for our trip.

Glowing Tribute To the Pioneers

In an address to the pioneer reunion at Heppner, R. A. Booth, now republican candidate for the United States senate, who once rode the ranges in eastern Oregon, paid a glowing tribute to the men and women who brought civilization to the wild places. Probably the most striking phase of the address was the tribute he paid his parents, themselves pioneers, and in this devotion he glorified the early settlers of the state. In part, Mr. Booth said:

"To me there can be no other people like the Oregon pioneers. To me there can be no other land like the one of my birth, from whose bounty I have always been fed. Over her borders the stars gleam with more gladness; the rivers race with greater joy; the forests sway in deeper reverence, and her fields yield greater abundance.

"My knowledge of the pioneer does not come from historians' records or the romancer's tales. I know them. They were and are my kin. The first thought of protection that came to me was suggested by the tender care of a pioneer woman. The first emotion of my heart was born in response to her affection, and in the years that have since followed there has come to me no impulse more noble than the one to make more restful, more cheerful the declining years of that woman. I cannot speak with complacency, for what I did seems so little and came so late. The words that I now speak are for the purpose of kindling in some heart a flame that will make some work-weary pioneer mother more happy. Out beneath the sunny skies of southern Oregon a granite shaft bears the name of that pioneer woman. Mothers of Oregon, forgive me for speaking in a manner in any sense personal to myself. I do it because there is no other way in which I can convey to you the regard, the reverence I have for you, for what I have said of my mother can be said also of you.

"And I see the old log cabin built by a pioneer father. Its construction seemed to me the acme of skill and strength. Its builder, to me, was the master of all things. A few swings of his ax and the forest supplied his wants. He touched the earth and it yielded a harvest. His toil brought us bread and the wasting of his years added to ours. He still lives to cheer us, always full of sympathy and love. More than four score years have passed over his head.

"The meed of praise I offer my father I offer also to you. I can do no more. What you have given your children, your country, your race, the world, is beyond all words to describe. Such acts can never again come to any people. There is no more west; there are no new worlds to subdue; there is no other prize so valuable, no other hands able to perform, no other hearts so strong and true.

"With the rapidly recurring events of a century passing more rapidly than the weaver's shuttle, what the pioneers did will soon be but a dim memory among the living and it will be left to the cold pages of history to tell the story of the westward march and the founding of a state. It is left for us of a later generation to ennoble the work of the pioneers by transmitting the heroic character and integrity of purpose that they possessed to those who come after. To do less is to be worthy of a place in the line of transmission and a blot on their memory. What they bought with their lives and service has been delivered only in small part, for out of the coming years will be an ever increasing heritage to all whose feet stand upon the Oregon land and whose hands labor for its development."

Stock Market Holding Firm

Receipts for the week at Portland have been: Cattle 1,384, calves 54, hogs 2,088, sheep 6,794.

Cattle liquidation comparatively light. Market firm in all departments. Best light steers sold Monday at $7.35, bulk steer sales $6.75 to $7.10. Butcher stock in small supply with prices steady.

Swine receipts inside of 3,000 for week. The average run of hogs at this time is not a prime quality, due to the high prices of grain. Bulk of best light stock sold at $8.40 to $8.50.

A good-sized run of sheep and lambs with steady to strong prices on yearlings and ewes, the former being up a nickel, at $5.30, and a bunch of ewes selling at $4.50. No fancy stock in the lamb division.

Best Method for Preserving Fruit

Marketing specialists of the Department of Agriculture who have been following the fruit situation call attention to the fact that in almost all wholesale markets peaches for canning and preserving are very bountiful, and are being sold at prices advantageous for canning in spite of the increased price of sugar.

While the peach crop has been somewhat short in some sections, heavy crops from other states have been shipped in and have tended to keep prices at a figure which encourages canning. Later, after the height of the crop movement, prices for fruit have a tendency to rise. Retailers are urged to enable their customers to obtain fruit for canning at prices commensurate with the present low wholesale price.

A great many housewives are now being deterred from canning and preserving their usual supply because of the increase in the price of sugar. There is no indication, however, that the price of sugar will fall materially during the present fruit season. It is estimated, though, that with peaches at their present prices the combination of peaches and sugar necessary for preserving will not make a prohibitive total cost. Moreover, there are successful methods of canning fruit which call for much less sugar than that usually employed in this process by home preservers.

The department recommends the following method of putting up peaches and apples without and sugar for those who find sugar prices prohibitive for canning:

"If the price of sugar is prohibitive one may can peaches so that they will keep indefinitely by using plain water instead of syrup. The following recipe may be used:

"Remove skins from peaches by immersing in boiling water for about one minute and then dipping in cold water. Place whole peaches in glass jars or tins and fill jars with hot water. Place rubber and top in place and sterilize for 15 minutes in hot water bath outfits, 12 minutes in water seal, 10 minutes at five pounds steam pressure or five minutes at 10 pounds steam pressure.

"Of course the peaches when removed from the jar will not taste so sweet as those canned in syrup. However, if sweetening is desired it may be added when the fruit is to be eaten.

"This same method is good for canning with syrups containing varying amounts of sugar. A very thin syrup may be used if the housewife does not wish to dispense entirely with the sugar.

"Apples may also be canned (for apple sauce, pie filling, etc.), using plain water instead of a sugar syrup. Department specialists have repeatedly canned them by this method. In the case of apples, jars should be sterilized 16 minutes in hot water bath outfits, 12 minutes in water seal, 10 minutes under five pounds of steam and four minutes under 10 pounds of steam."

Homesteaders Leave Extended by Law

H. R. 13717.—An act to provide for leave of absence for homestead entrymen in one or two periods.

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That the entryman mentioned in section 2291, Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended by the act of June 6, 1912, Thirty-seventh Statutes, 123, upon filing in the local land office notice of the beginning of such absence at his option shall be entitled to a leave of absence in one or two continuous periods not exceeding in the aggregate five months in each year after establishing residence; and upon the termination of such absence, in each period, the entryman shall file a notice of such termination in the local land office; but in case of commutation, the fourteen months actual residence, as now required by law, must be shown, and the person commuting be at the time a citizen of the United States.

Approved August 22, 1914.

New Bullet Shield Used.

The Canadian troops when they sail may be equipped with an implement which would be useful both as an entrenching tool and as a bullet shield when defending an entrenched position against an infantry attack.

It is a new form of spade, which would be used to dig shallow trenches during an advance. In the blade an oval aperture is made. After the trenches were dug the spade would be spiked to the ground, then, lying prone behind it, the soldier would fire through the aperture.

Will Pay High For Stolen Beer

Not less than two years in the state penitentiary at Salem is the price Henry Williams and Pat Murphy will pay for the few bottles of beer which they took from the Barager saloon in July, says the Grants Pass Courier. The sentence pronounced by Judge Calkins, following the conviction of the two men upon indictment for burglary, was an indeterminate one of from two to five years in the penitentiary, parole being possible after service of the two-year minimum if the men are well-behaved prisoners. Williams and Murphy were convicted of complicity in the theft of a barrel of bottled beer from the saloon. The Farlow brothers, indicted upon the same charge, have not been apprehended, having escaped from the county jail three weeks ago.

Booze is also responsible for a penitentiary sentence for another man, Charles Gallagher, who pleaded guilty to a deadly assault upon Fred Aramossia, a 17-year-old boy. The men were of a party of a dozen in the jungles west of town, and after becoming filled and crazed with alcohol, engaged in a battle in which Aramossia was badly slashed with a knife. The sentence pronounced upon Gallagher was from one to ten years in the state penitentiary.

William J. Young was found guilty by a jury upon the indictment charging larceny from a dwelling. The evidence bore out the charge that he had stolen clothing from the residence of Charles Hanson. The jury was out all the afternoon before it could agree upon a verdict in this case. Attorney Williams, for the defendant, entered a motion for a new trial and was given thirty days in which to perfect it.

The case against Charles Moore, who was indicted along with William Crawford charged with aiding a prisoner to escape from the city jail, was thrown out of court upon a directed verdict from the judge. He ruled that Harrington, the man whose escape Moore was charged with assisting, was locked up in the jail on a John Doe warrant, and that there had been no evidence presented to show that Harrington was the man wanted upon the warrant. The point was raised by Attorney Johnston, appearing for the defendant, who argued that Harrington was not held by due process of law, and that whoever aided him in his escape was not guilty under the statute of aiding the escape of a "prisoner held by legal process."
