Talent Children Have Fair Day

Wednesday was Talent's biggest day since the Fourth of July, for that was fair day, when the children of Wagner, Anderson and Valley View joined with those of Talent in holding a big industrial fair. Some idea of the magnitude of the event can be gained from the fact that there were 218 exhibit entries, some of which comprised a dozen or more separate articles. The articles were displayed in the basement of the school building and compared favorably with those shown at the county fair at Medford. In addition to the articles made or produced by the children there were two fine exhibits of fruits and vegetables by R. E. Packard and Charles Holdridge. The Eden Valley Nurseries had a splendid display of roses and dahlias and the Bagley Canning Company showed several cases of fine canned goods, including a lot of luscious fruit put up in glass jars. Joe Wilson exhibited some skillfully executed samples of needlework, showing that a mere man can successfully compete with woman in the latter's special domain.

This is the second industrial fair which the children of Talent and vicinity have held and they certainly did themselves proud, demonstrating their ability to soon take the place occupied by their parents as leaders in agriculture, education and mechanic arts. The enterprising school board paid liberal premiums for the best exhibits and all classes joined together to make the affair a great success.

Before viewing the exhibits, the out-of-town visitor is shown over the school building by Professor Ager or one of his able assistants. During the past summer the second story rooms were finished and most of them are now occupied by classes. This gives ample room for all the pupils and teachers and will be sufficient to meet the needs of the city for many years to come. Peter Spencer resides in the spacious assembly room and the other Ashland teachers, Mrs. O. H. Barnhill and Mrs. George Stannard, also have very pleasant rooms. There is a library with a fine assortment of books and in the domestic science room there are two sewing machines, two cutting tables and four large sewing tables. The manual training room is equipped for all kinds of wood-working and is a very interesting place to visit.

But let us keep on going until we reach the bottom of things and get in on the ground floor. The large gymnasium and an adjoining room look like a section of a county fair, being filled with a bewildering display of fruits, flowers, grains, vegetables, poultry, fancy work and other things too numerous to mention. But we must not overlook the plain needlework and the tempting display of cooked foods by the domestic science class, the baskets and cabinet work from the manual training department and hundreds of compositions, exercises and drawings from the various grades and schools. The subject matter of many of the papers show that agriculture and other practical and useful subjects are being taught in a way the children can understand and make use of the knowledge thus acquired.

Appetizing odors emanate from an adjoining room, where lunch is being served by the ladies of the improvement club, eight dollars being raised in this manner for the library fund. Coffee was served free. The pupils of the Talent school made $9.50 selling ice cream, this money to be used to purchase equipment for athletics. Many of the visitors ate their lunch out on the wide and beautiful lawn in front of the school building, which adds much to the attractiveness of the latter. After lunch a number of amusing athletic contests were held in front of the school house.

Two programs were given, one at 10 o'clock and another at 2 o'clock. Speeches were made by P. L. Harrington, state field and industrial worker, and county superintendent J. P. Wells. The latter told of two Jackson county boys who will be given free trips to the state fair because of the excellent work they have done in raising corn and hogs. One of the boys is only ten years old, yet raised a pig which gained from 44 pounds in May to 285 pounds in September, an average of two pounds per day. Professor Spencer also gave an excellent talk on school athletics. There were three songs by pupils of the Talent school, three readings by Miss Bertha Elizabeth Calkins and two piano solos by Miss Mamie Holmes, both the latter being Ashland girls. Miss Holmes' music was played with excellent technique and the number of piano pupils which she has secured in Talent shows that her musical ability is appreciated. Miss Calkins outdid even herself, winning tremen-
