Day of Prayer Observed Here

[Deferred from last issue.]
The churches of Ashland took notice of President Wilson's peace proclamation Sunday and good audiences responded.
At the Presbyterian church Sunday Dr. Carnahan's text was "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ and make no provision for the flesh to fulfill the lusts thereof." He placed the blame of the war to Europe's preparedness for it and declared the fine-spun theory that fear would prevent nations from going to war had been exploded. At the close of the sermon he read Mrs. J. B. Brown's poem "The Great Holocaust." Miss Creekpau sang the solo and the choir joined in the chorus of "Sweet Peace, the Gift of God's Love." The closing prayer service was participated in by three prominent citizens and Rev. Ooster made the closing address.

At the Baptist church Rev. A. R. Blackmore's address was a carefully prepared statement of the present war and the arguments made in behalf of militarism and the long years of education in Europe that makes war possible. The argument "in time of peace prepare for war" and that to insure peace preparedness for war is necessary, he called the most widespread fallacy of Europe and declared that "this is now being shot to pieces in the face of the civilized world." Rev. McKee opened the service by reading President Wilson's peace proclamation. In the evening Rev. Blackmore continued the theme on the horrors and destruction and wastefulness of war. The two sermons were a strong indictment of militarism from its very foundation and left the audience with the impression that a new interpretation of national patriotism is the crying need of our times.

Rev. H. J. Van Fossen. In the sermon which he preached at the Methodist church Sunday morning, said he could not at this time pray for peace in Europe, as President Wilson suggested. "I believe that it is God's purpose to let the Europeans fight it out among themselves, until they can see that material power is futile and worse than useless. They have put their dependence in great armies and navies, in commerce, science and other material things, but have neglected God and material things. The present war will show them the folly of such a course. The mighty munitions of war which they have built for their protection will prove their undoing, for which they they will work their own destruction. It seems that only such a war as this can teach them how worse than useless is war and that they should put their dependence in spiritual rather than material things."

"The wars of Napoleon shook the thrones of Europe and the present war is destined to destroy these thrones, to put an end to monarchy and to give people their right to rule themselves, for it is a war for human liberty."
"The Bible tells us of a vineyard that God planted in a good location and gave it good attention, yet it produced sour grapes instead of fine fruit. The nations of Europe are located in one of the best places in the world and they have had great opportunities for doing good and making the most of themselves. Instead of producing the fruits of the spirit—joy and peace and love of one another—they have brought forth the fruits of materialism, one of which is war. God withdrew himself from the unprofitable vineyard and left it to its fate, just as he withdrew himself from the Jewish nation, the Roman and others who forgot God and as he will from the warring nations in Europe today."
"Here in Oregon we have a battle of our own to fight in about a month and it is a great battle, because it concerns the safety and wellbeing of our homes. If we are good soldiers of the cross we must register and vote for Oregon dry."
"There is another election coming for each one of us. We must choose whom we will serve, God or Mammon; whether we shall have peace or war within our souls; whether or not we shall elect Christ to come into our lives with all the blessings of righteousness and reign in our hearts through all eternity."

Effective Work For the Normal

Ben Sheldon, vice-president of the Medford Commercial Club and secretary of the Medford Charter Commission, has returned from a five weeks' tour of the state and has become familiar with the situation in regard to the reopening of the Southern Oregon State Normal School. This first hand information has been very helpful to the committee directing the campaign and makes it possible to still further direct effort in the most useful and effective channels. Mr. Sheldon's visit had the effect of correcting many erroneous impressions and putting right on the issue many people of influence who are before the public. The result of his work was highly satisfactory to the campaign committee.

Mr. Sheldon, however, made it clear to the committee and in an address to the Commercial Club Monday night that it will require about $1500 more than is now in sight to make the campaign effective. There is still much to be done if the Southern Oregon Normal is to be reopened. The merits of the matter must still be carried home to many a voter who will otherwise fail in his duty to himself and the cause of education through lack of information.
The Commercial Club appointed a committee of ten to raise the necessary funds. They are now at work along several different lines. Merchants are being asked to give two per cent of their cash receipts to the fund for a few weeks instead of present discounts and premiums. The teachers of the public schools will be asked to make up a purse with about one dollar each. The lodges are to be asked for contributions to the worthy cause—the Elks donated fifty dollars Saturday night. The churches also—being strongly in favor at all times of making this a city of homes and schools and churches—will be asked to contribute to the fund which is designed to bring about the thing for which they pray.

The committee which was appointed at the Commercial Club meeting Monday night to raise the needed funds is composed of Frank Jordan, J. B. Ware, J. R. Crossall, C. B. Wolf, H. G. Enders, C. B. Lamkin, S. H. Palmerlee, J. W. McCoy, J. A. Kolagen, O. F. Carson. Their motto is "Get the Money." Look out for them. Little Monmouth raised $7000 to retain her school. Little Weston has raised $4000 this year to put hers back on the map. For the Southern Oregon Normal Campaign this year $2200 has been raised. Their is need for $1500 more. It would be pitiful to fail at this stage of the game for want of a few paltry dollars.

B. F. Mulkey of Medford has not lost any of his love for the Southern Oregon State Normal School even though he resigned the presidency of that institution two years before it closed in order to engage in the practice of law, in which he has been successful and was later elected district attorney. He left his law practice and an important criminal case last Wednesday in order to go to Salem and do a week's personal work among a wide line of acquaintances and friends throughout the state who mingle annually at the state fair.

Mr. Mulkey had promised the committee this service. Right in the midst of it a client, Mrs. McNulty, was brought back to Medford on requisition papers from Boise Idaho, being charged with collecting $350 on a forged instrument, and when she arrived Attorney Mulkey was at Salem battling for the re-opening of the state normal. Saturday afternoon Mr. Mulkey went to Portland and in Sunday's Journal appears in a prominent place an interview with him setting forth ably the reasons why the school should be re-opened. Mr. Mulkey was always on hand prepared to address an audience on the subject, whether it consisted of one dozen or five thousand people.

In these days when it is so common to excuse one's self when asked to do something for the re-opening of the state normal school it should be borne in mind that two of Medford's prominent citizens, Ben Sheldon and B. F. Mulkey, have had the public spirit and enthusiasm to get in and do some real work.

The Tidings is on sale at Poley's drug store, 17 East Main street.
