Mrs. Russell Tells Of Church History

"There is no friend like the old friend That shared our morning days. There is no place like the old place Where you and I were born.

With these words as her inspiration Mrs. A. H. Russell, at the Methodist church Golden Jubilee Wednesday night, entered upon her theme of telling about Ashland before the day of churches.

"Remember the days of old. Consider the years of many generations. Ask thy Father, and He will show thee. Thine elders, and they will tell thee.

Expressing her gratification at being asked to join in recalling Ashland's church history Mrs. Russell said: "I have watched Ashland grow from one bachelor's cabin until now—from April fourteenth, 1853. This cabin was near the ford on the then nameless creek just below where the ice plant stands—the home of A. D. Helman and Eber Emery.

"Later on a school house was built near Mr. Dunn's. The summer of 1857 Rev. A. M. Williams, a Presbyterian missionary, came to this valley from Yreka, California. He stopped at father's and promised to preach in the school house next Sunday.

something better than a school house to worship God in. In the year 1865 Mrs. Gillette and Mrs. Giddings collected about thirty dollars by subscription to buy an acre of land to build a church at the head of Church street—thus naming the street.

"We succeeded in time and used the new woolen mills, before the machinery was placed. It proved to be the largest affair ever given in our village. Our good men gave time and money to help make it a success.

Illustrating the conditions with excerpts from records of the day, Mrs. Russell told how the church foundation had begun to crumble to decay and had become inadequate for a church big enough to accommodate the growing church population of the village.

From a record of events in March 1877 Mrs. Russell showed how an earnest effort was being made to complete the church building on the location near the Academy. The old record stated that there was not a building in town capable of seating the congregations which assembled weekly to hear church services.

"The first Sunday school in Ashland was held at the home of Mrs. J. R. Hayworth—now the W. C. Myer farm. This Sunday school soon outgrew the capacity of Mrs. Hayworth's parlor. Then it moved to the school house. Mrs. Hayworth insisted that a man ought to superintend, so A. G. Rockfellow and J. H. Russell were elected joint superintendents—each meant cleaning house, building fires, etc.

"The pioneers of sixty years ago underwent all the vicissitudes of frontier life. The very necessities could not, at times, be obtained. They were surrounded by savage tribes that let no opportunity pass for murder and robbery.

"If you of today feel inclined to criticize the 'slow pioneers,' picture a wilderness, then a rude log cabin. Next a small garden, then the unplowed and unfenced wheat field. Flour twenty-five cents per pound and other things in proportion.

Don't Be Sidetracked

Ashland Record, 11th.

Ashland people should not falter in their support of the project to develop the mineral springs contiguous to this city and create here a great resort for the attraction of tourists, the rejuvenation of humanity and the upbuilding of a prosperous community.

The idea that Ashland is naturally adapted to become a great resort is old. It was held by many of the pioneers. The idea has been part of the official records of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company for a quarter of a century.

In the face of the mass of favorable opinions it is presumptuous in the extreme to deny the possibility or feasibility of making a resort here. In the face of the existing economic conditions, under which we are laboring, it is preposterous to suggest that we should lie down and not attempt to realize on this great asset of climate and scenery and healthful waters.

ly childish to allow personalities to stand between us and realization of all that adequate development and exploitation will mean to us.

Any policy, therefore, that aims at the defeat of the project now started, should be summarily rejected by the thinking citizen. Mineral springs development is Ashland's salvation. Any argument that aims to defer action should be analyzed carefully for its motive, before it is accepted as gospel truth.

Ashland has voted to spend $175,000 on mineral springs development. A firm of New York bond experts have examined our bond issue. They declare that we must amend our city charter in order to make these bonds legal and salable.
