Mother Fails to Care For Children

Three children of Henry Sargent of Griffin creek, aged four, eight and ten years, were ordered placed in a state institution for the care of dependent children Wednesday in a hearing before the juvenile court, upon the allegation that the mother, Mrs. Josephine Sargent, was not fit to care for them. Evidence to this effect was introduced. The father did not appear at the hearing.

Boost for "Soda" Water.

(From Oregon Journal, January 14, 1915.)

Senator Garland introduced a bill today providing for an appropriation of $5,000 for the improvement of a public soda spring and grounds owned by the state at Sodaville, Linn county. The money is to be expended under the direction of three trustees to be appointed by the governor. Evidently we have got something to learn about how to develop mineral springs.

GEO. W. SEAGER.

Introducing a bill particularly of this kind is quite different from enacting it into law. Meantime we are boosting Ashland mineral water by having "Siskiyou" here on tap at the state house for the members of the legislature, and it is a great bit.

F. D. WAGNER.

Editorial Note.—The Tidings editor has believed for some time just as Mr. Seager says: "Ashland has something to learn about developing mineral waters." Also it has something to learn about treatment of those who donate time and money to it.

Announcement.

I wish to announce to patrons and public in general that on and after January 25 I will make my headquarters at Swenson & McRae's furniture store, from which place I will establish a contracting painting business. I have also taken charge of the wall paper department, of which there is a splendid assortment. Having had years of experience in that line, I am sure I can aid you in selecting your paper decorations. Harmony of colors and blending of shades are absolutely necessary in all interior decorations to insure satisfaction. I will absolutely guarantee all work. I will furnish estimates on work, on solicitation. Phone store 75, or Harry Simpson, 316-R. Residence, 175 Meade street.

Many of the orchardists of the valley are shipping apples to the Sacramento Valley, coming thereby in actual competition with the California product.

Mrs. D. N. Davis of the Green Springs district was in town Tuesday.

The business men's prayer meeting is drawing quite a turnout this week. Song service in front of the city hall by several of those interested in the cause proved to be a drawing card.

He bought it at Enders'.

J. M. Brooks, who has been in Medford for some time, returned to Ashland this week. Mr. Brooks will take charge of D. M. Lowe's ranch while the latter is at the San Francisco fair with the Jackson county exhibit.

F. J. Murphy, wife and baby left for Chehalis, Wash., Monday evening, where Mr. Murphy has secured a position with the telephone company of that town. He was for a long time a lineman in the employ of the local telephone company.

Is Assured

The never-falling booster spirit has scored another success. In a conference with the beet sugar committee at the Medford Hotel, yesterday, C. W. Nibley, the Salt Lake capitalist, assured the beet boosters that the sugar factory would be established. While no definite figures are available at the present writing, it is certain that more than the required 5,000 acres have been signed up. On Tuesday the stores of Medford and Talent were closed and a systematic campaign waged. The Medford people signed up 1,168 acres, making a total of about 3,500 acres secured by that city. Talent carried off the honors for a single day's work, signing up 1,758 acres on Tuesday, 640 of these being in the Shasta Valley. It is expected that Grants Pass will hand in a total exceeding 2,000 acres, while Gold Hill, Ashland and other districts will bring up the total to far above the required amount.

Judge Dunn and George Millner signed up 100 acres in the district south of town recently. Figures for the Ashland total are hard to obtain, but we are assured that the local committee will turn in a total which will compare favorably with other sections.

The establishment of the factory means a great deal to the valley as it will furnish a large payroll during the season and will also require large amounts of wood and other local products. If figures from other beet-raising sections are to be believed, the raising of beets will bring in a far greater revenue than any other kind of agricultural pursuit now practiced in the valley and will require and pay for a great amount of labor which will give the unemployed work. The waste from the factory makes the best kind of fodder for cattle and should give a considerable impetus to this industry as well.

New Company Offers Power

A. A. Flynn, electrical engineer for the Rogue River Public Service Corporation, was in town Wednesday. This corporation has submitted a proposition to the city council to furnish Ashland with electric current in wholesale quantities. The corporation has a plant at Gold Hill which at present is generating 500 electrical horsepower and which is being enlarged so as to generate an additional thousand horsepower. It is furnishing Gold Hill with a portion of its lights and also has a proposition under consideration by the Medford council of somewhat the same nature as that proposed here. Mr. Flynn tells us that if his company can land the Ashland and Medford contracts they will immediately enlarge their plant so as to produce 7,000 horsepower. The Beaver Portland Cement Company is a customer of this company.

The California-Oregon Power Company also has a proposition before the council to furnish current to the city. Between the two propositions it is probable the city will come to an agreement with one or the other that will prove satisfactory and make an end to the lighting troubles in Ashland.

Evangelistic Meetings.

The meetings of this week began in the Baptist church with the house crowded almost to its capacity, and every night since the attendance has been good. Interest is growing. More people are becoming aroused to their privileges and responsibilities with reference to the Christian faith. A good message and good signing every night. Come!

Friday night is Young People's night. A cordial invitation is extended to all members of young people's societies in the city. Also wanted, 250 young men and women from the high school.

Sunday afternoon there is to be a meeting for men only in the Congregational church, at 3:15. Wanted, a big male chorus. Come!

Sunday evening the union meetings transfer to the Presbyterian church.

Monte Briggs drew quite a crowd on the Plaza Tuesday afternoon by sending up a couple of balloons. The balloons ascended straight up to a great height and then started south, but soon hit a current of westbound air and floated off toward Medford. By the time they were disappearing about fifty people had collected and were straining their eyes to see the cause of all the excitement.

Sydney Sprout, consulting engineer of the California-Oregon Power Company, was in the city Tuesday on business connected with the interests of the company.

"Oregon for the Settler"

No more timely publication could possibly have been planned than "Oregon for the Settler," the booklet that is just off the presses and which represents one of the efforts of the Southern Pacific in its campaign to direct attention to Western Oregon.

The book comes just at a time when Eastern people are turning their eyes toward the West. It will have influence with two classes, the globe-trotting American and the homeseeker.

Sixty-two pages are given to descriptive matter and pictures of Western Oregon, and fifty-three subjects are treated. It is a book that is intended to convey exact information as to the opportunities offered the prospective settler.

Beginning with a general statement concerning the geographical divisions of the state, "Oregon for the Settler" takes up a discussion of the western half as it is known to Oregonians. It gives general descriptions of the Rogue River Valley, the Umpqua and the Willamette Valleys, and the country bordering the west coast. Farm products are then given intelligent discussion, the last third of the pages of the book being given over to furnishing exact information as to where landseekers may find cheap and desirable lands in the four sections of the territory served by the Southern Pacific lines. It tells where cheap lands are located in the Rogue River country, along the Umpqua, along the Willamette, and what they are good for.

"Oregon for the Settler" comes from the presses just when a large travel may be expected as a result of the European wars and the opening of the Panama Pacific and the San Diego Expositions.

The number of travelers who have kept right on going, after getting a glimpse of the valley lands close to the main line of the Southern Pacific, can hardly be counted. They have always had the impression conveyed by the wet, undrained and often overflowed lands close to the big streams.

"Oregon for the Settler" counteracts that impression. It tells the traveler that the lands they are looking for are over among the hills, and that Western Oregon is a succession of fertile valleys which cannot be seen from the train.

The Southern Pacific Company aims to tell the truth about Oregon and in this book has called on the Agricultural College for many of its facts. It treats the situation in a new way, and one that will be approved by the honest and conscientious real estate dealer.

Notice to Fruit Growers.

An informal meeting of the fruit growers of the Ashland Fruit and Produce association is called for Saturday, January 23, 1915, at the city hall to discuss the advisability of having the books of the association thoroughly audited and also for an expression of choice for manager for the coming year and any other business that may be proposed.
