Would Issue An Injunction

The following article comes from the Anti-Saloon League at Portland, and while the writer most assuredly got his data a little mixed, particularly in reference to Ashland's proximity to the great liquor warehouses, a good idea of the enthusiasm aroused may be gained:

"Superintendent R. P. Hutton of the Oregon Anti-Saloon League spoke Sunday at Ashland, right on the Oregon California line. Facing the great liquor warehouses, and waving one of their circular letters, he called for volunteers to fight this to the United States supreme court for an injunction, and called upon the congregation to rise en masse and repeat, 'We will see this thing through.' He closed his address by saying:

"Thousands of dollars have been spent in erecting mail order liquor houses along the California line. Scores of thousands of dollars have already been spent in listing Oregon voters and soliciting them by mail for liquor trade after January 1, 1916, by mail orders and express deliveries. Three hundred thousand letters are in the mail each month now to Oregonians. The business is so great that Uncle Sam no longer stamps them, but weighs them and takes a check for the immense sums for postage. Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent by a single firm in the course of the year. For all, it will run to the million mark.

"All this can mean but one thing, viz., that they propose to disobey the anti-advertising section of the Anderson law until we get an injunction from the supreme court prohibiting them from sending circulars, letters, price lists, solicitation or information to any one within the bounds of Oregon.

"Like the rowdies whom the conductor forbade to spit in the car, and who went to the front platform and, aided by the speed of the train, streaked the whole outside of the car, these hoodlum liquorites retire to our California vestibule and, aided by the speed of modern communication and transportation, are expectorating upon the remotest corner of Oregon.

"We must fight this to the supreme court for an injunction that will prohibit the sending to every Oregon woman their leering suggestion that each of them is one of 'Oregon's 380,000 tipplers.' It is the acid test as to whether Oregon is a quitter or has the stomach to see this disagreeable job through to its finish, either in federal injunction for such soliciting or national prohibition. This is the time of trial for Oregon drags, and continuance the test.

"You propose to stick. Your rising said so. You couldn't help but stick. Why? Because this is Oregon and you are Oregonians. Thank God for Oregon's Oregonian 'stick-to-it-till-victory-or-death' spirit. Ashland is in the first line trenches ready to charge or dig in and hang on, and everyone ready to die or spend the last cent rather than bow to the robber booze barons on yonder state line."

Visitor Tells of Employment Aid

John H. Barbour, inspector in charge of United States immigration service work in Oregon, was a recent visitor in Ashland in the interests of the free employment bureau organized by the departments of labor, commerce and postoffice. Speaking of the bureau, he said:

"Where the state conducts employment bureaus, we work in conjunction, turning over names of applicants, but where no state bureau exists, as in Oregon, we aim to find occupation for the workless. Applications are listed with the postmasters in the various cities, who forward them to us, and we endeavor to secure employment. We are confining our efforts at the start to the country and endeavoring to supply farmers and fruit growers with reliable workmen. We have furnished labor for the hop yards, hay fields and orchards as well as the farmer.

"In Hood River this season we supplied the pickers and packers needed above the local help available, and were there any demand, could do the same here, working in conjunction with the exchanges. We have secured permanent places for thousands of farm laborers and believe that we will eventually fill a needed field. We have many European farm immigrants listed and find them reliable and competent aids for the farmer.

"There is no charge connected with the service rendered and either employer or workmen can avail themselves of our services."

Says Times Are Picking Up Fast

State Superintendent of Banks Sargent of Salem, in announcing his statement showing the condition of all banks in the state at the close of business on September 2, declared that it showed that business was rapidly recovering from the general depression and predicted it would soon return to normal conditions.

"Confidence of the people of Oregon in the future, and a rapid recovery from the general depression in all lines of trade, is evidenced in the statement," he said. "Although the total demand deposits of all the banks in the state, including balances due to other banks, show a decrease of $6,212,476.65 for the year, there has been a steady increase during the past two or three months, this statement showing an increase of $1,813,538.12 since the statement of June 23, 1915.

"Time and savings deposits continue to grow and have now reached a grand total of $37,520,873.17, an increase of $2,379,672.88 since the September statement of last year.

"Rediscunts with the federal reserve bank amount to $140,315.20, having increased only $36,325.57 since the June 7 call. Other rediscunts and bills payable amounting to $2,533,430.30 are unusually high at this time of the year. This is due to the fact that farmers do not seem to be disposed to sell their crops but are holding for higher prices. This item shows an increase of $1,154,743.36 over the statement of September 12, 1914.

"The national banks of the state now have an investment of $461,783.34 in the stock of the federal reserve bank and are carrying reserve balances with that institution amounting to $1,454,509.41.

"The statement as a whole makes a most satisfactory showing and indicates a rapid growth of business during the past two months and an early return to normal conditions. The banks are carrying good reserves and are in a position to meet all legitimate demands."

State Fair at Salem Best Ever

The fifty-fourth annual Oregon state fair, which is conceded to be the best fair ever held in the state, is over. The closing day, last Saturday, was marked by as great enthusiasm as any day earlier in the week and honored the Shriners, the pioneers and the granges, to which it was dedicated. In point of finance the fair was one notable in the history of the state, the gate receipts for the week being $21,232, exclusive of campers and automobile and vehicle tickets, and not including the passes for exhibitors and concessioners. The amount is next to 1913 in amount, when $28,193, the record gate receipts, was taken in.

Of the fair just closed, Salem Day and Portland Day, Wednesday and Thursday, showed the largest gate receipts, the former having the largest in regular admission but the latter excelling in number admitted in automobiles.

Sketches of types of trenches dug by the Germans which appeared in a recent Portland paper showed a dug-out below the trench which was reached by a ladder from the trench proper. The queer part of the picture was that the retiring dugout where the soldiers off duty were supposed to obtain rest, was fitted up with a dressing table of the French Queen Ann style, a nicely upholstered chair and a big mirror.

WHAT CATARRH IS

It has been said that every third person has catarrh in some form. Science has shown that nasal catarrh often indicates a general weakness of the body; and local treatments in the form of snuffs and vapors do little, if any good.

To correct catarrh you should treat its cause by enriching your blood with the oil-food in Scott's Emulsion which is a medicinal food and a building-tonic, free from alcohol or any harmful drugs. Try it. Scott & Downe, Bloomfield, N. J.

Lakeview Equines March Away to War

Redding Searchlight: A band of 300 big mules and 58 heavy horses arrived at Hawes station, near Anderson, this evening. The stock came overland from Lakeview, Ore., where Dr. H. Hordorn of Chico purchased them, presumably for the allies in Europe.

The band left Lakeview Friday a week ago. The drive is one of 450 miles. The mules and horses will be driven to Red Bluff, where they will be loaded into fifteen stock cars and shipped to San Francisco. The railroad stockyard here is not large enough to hold them.

This is the largest band of horses and mules ever shipped from this part of the state. Dr. Hordorn shipped 200 head from here two or three months ago. This band is worth considerably over $40,000.

Twelve men left Lakeview with the animals, but as they became better drilled in "marching" the number of drivers was reduced to five. As they were strung out along the road they made a column nearly a mile long. The dust they raised could be seen for miles and miles.

Two gray mares wearing bells preceded the band. The horses and mules soon learned to follow their leaders. It is a singular fact, says Dr. Hordorn, that gray mares are much better for leaders than black ones. Horses and mules will follow a gray leader in preference to a black bell wearer every time, he says.

When the band met an automobile or even a freight wagon in the road, the 358 horses and mules, taking fright, would scamper off into the brush up the mountain side. The gray bell mares were led by cowboys. After the stampede was over the cowboys would keep ringing the bells on the leaders and in the course of an hour or two the frightened animals would all be back in place in ranks and the "march" would be resumed in regular fashion.

Electric Company Asks Fair Deal

Asking that the service of the Oregon-California Power Company in all the territory in the state where it operates be considered in the investigation now being made of its rates and charges by the Oregon public service commission, that company has sent a petition to the commission.

The complaint against the company was brought by the cities of Grants Pass, Medford and Klamath Falls, and the first hearing has already been held. Other hearings are scheduled to be held in the complaining cities and at some other points.

Medford Tribune: Apple-picking operations are in full blast at the Hanley orchard, leased by Tou Velle and Harris, and a record-breaking crop of Newtowns is being harvested. Despite an unfavorable year, a 15 to 20 box yield to the tree is frequent and some trees have run as high as 40 boxes. The fruit averages high in quality. There are 65 acres of orchard, and this is one of the show orchards of the valley this season. Every tourist should be taken through it.

Why should the man who thinks he is the whole thing try to conceal it? He doesn't.

SIDNEY LANDON REVIVES MEMORIES OF GREAT MEN

"SIDNEY LANDON AND FOUR OF HIS SPEAKING LIKENESSES." Ashland Lyceum Course, Talent.

Exhibits Are Wanted Land Products Show

In announcing the second annual Manufacturers' and Land Products Show at Portland this year the management has decided to give free exhibit space to all counties or communities. The show opens October 25 and closes November 13, and comes at a season of the year when all the county fairs and the state fair at Salem are over.

More than 50,000 square feet of exhibit space has been provided for the display to be made showing the products of the factory, field and forest. To provide room for the land products exhibits, a temporary building will be erected adjoining the armory.

The exhibition will show the agricultural and horticultural greatness of the northwest. There is to be a grand prize for the best county display and special awards for potato and apple exhibits. Another prize will be given to the best individual farm exhibit. Low fares will be given by the transportation lines and it is expected the exhibition will attract many visitors to Portland.

The Manufacturers' and Land Products Show will be presented by the Chamber of Commerce, and directors have been chosen from the Oregon Development Bureau and the Industries and Manufacturers Bureau, two of the most important in the work of the new organization.

Low round-trip fares to the Manufacturers' and Land Products Show have been authorized by the management of the Southern Pacific from all of their stations in Oregon, and a large attendance is looked for from the people of this state.
