ance by this lecture alone! Then followed another treat in Professor Sweefer's address. He was booked to speak on "Some Microscopic Friends and Foes of Every Day Life," but his main theme was "The Mechanical Basis of Heredity," illustrated by slides. The question was not taken up in the old statistical manner, but an attempt was made in which he nobly succeeded in showing what the present century had contributed to the biology of the subject. It has been pretty definitely shown where the characters in living things reside, and when the egg of the plant or animal has been energized, or fertilized, there is a blending of these characters. Environment can not add to these, but may accelerate or retard their development; hence the importance of good environment.

New characters are not gradually acquired, but are introduced by the new combination of these hereditary carriers. We may choose characters in the plants and the animals and blend those we desire, but in man blind chance controls, and the problem of eugenics seems too difficult for us to solve or control. We are not the victims of fate, but we do inherit possibilities, and what we become depends upon our own energy or inertia within those potentialities. If the man recognizes his limitations and confines his energies to those limits he is less liable to discouragement. Hence the value in our listening to such a lecture.

The discussion on "Medical Inspection in Schools," led by Mrs. Noblit, was almost crowded out by the lateness of the hour and should be given a place on our next annual program. Then we had a surprise in store for us. Many good things came to us unexpectedly during this convention, as the attendance of Mrs. MacMath of Portland and of Miss Wills of Boston. The latter is the scientific temperance lecturer for the educational department of the National Anti-Saloon League and assistant editor of the Scientific Temperance Journal. She is at present touring the state with the Social Service Exposition, which is holding forth at present in Medford. The only way for the reading public to reap the value of her address is to have it reprinted in full. Miss Wills' entire lecture will appear in the next issue of the Tidings.

Announcements followed, committees were appointed, and we adjourned for dinner.

At the evening session the visiting club members were thrice welcomed: first by Mrs. Lamkin, then by Mayor Johnson and then by V. O. N. Smith, president of the Commercial Club. Mr. Smith, who is a popular young speaker, was felicitous in his choice of language and made every one lively and happy. Mrs. Canby of Grants Pass responded in a pleasing manner, and then it was our privilege to be entertained by classical music, both instrumental and vocal. Those who furnished us this great pleasure were Miss Alice Vandersluis of Talent and our own Doris Bagley of whom we are so proud, and Mrs. Sylvan Provost, who has accomplished so much for our musical department and who graciously responds and always pleases.

We then adjourned for a social hour and gave ourselves up to the conviviality of a banquet, of which the most refined in taste could but profusely praise.
