FRUIT and FARM

Expert Writes of Ashland Fruit

(By L. B. Bakatel, in the Portland Telegram.)

Jack Frost deserves to be hung. This is the opinion of not only A. C. Briggs, the manager of the Ashland Fruit and Produce Association, but of every farmer who raises peaches, especially.

The principal fruit crop of Ashland is peaches, but the early varieties were so badly nipped by frost this year that not one-tenth of the quantity was available for market that should have come in. As Mr. Briggs says: "We should be shipping peaches in carload lots, but as it is we are able to get only enough to fill express orders."

Not only did peaches suffer at the hands of the rascally Jack Frost, but berries were also hard hit. Where probably 20 to 25 carloads of strawberries could be shipped in a season, only two cars went out this year and they were sent to the Libby, McNeil Libby cannery in California. Mr. Briggs states that possibly 10 or 12 cars have been marketed, but they have gone out in express shipments of a few crates at a time instead of in car lots. Virtually all have gone to northern California markets. A car must be made up in two days, Mr. Briggs says, and in order to do this the berries must come in freely.

Unlike other fruits, the apple and pear crops are excellent. They are received in good condition, free from worms and fruit diseases. This is due either to the fact growers sprayed freely and in good season or to favorable weather for these fruits. The association will ship out two or three cars of pears and probably 15 cars of apples. In addition, two or three cars of late peaches, which were not hurt by the frost as the early varieties were, will go out.

The bulk of Ashland's fruits and vegetables go to lumber and mining camps of California. Some is shipped to Portland, but very little, owing to the distance—342 miles—and the fact that the Portland market is more readily supplied from nearer home. There is competition and lots of it, Mr. Briggs states, for San Francisco and Sacramento are eager for the northern California business and constantly fight for it.

Prices, according to Mr. Briggs, have been and still are very good; in fact, the best in years. This has been especially true with reference to peaches.

All fruits and vegetables shipped by the association are picked on the day they were shipped, so are absolutely fresh when started on their journey to the consumer. The association has been organized since 1902, and although a small concern, has shipped in that time more than 1,500 carloads of fruits and probably as many of vegetables, to Pacific coast markets.

Growers' Agency.

The principal activities of the Fruit Growers' Agency, Inc., which was organized last March and already has a membership representing almost 80 per cent of the tonnage of the Pacific northwest, may be summarized as follows:

Daily "Market News Service," based on telegraphic reports over a direct wire from Washington, D. C. This service is conducted by C. W. Kitchen, market station assistant, assisted by H. A. Harris, also of the office of markets.

Special service pertaining to "Uniform Account Sales" and "Accounting Methods," conducted by G. A. Nahstoll, assistant in market business practice, of the office of markets. An assistant will be assigned to Mr. Nahstoll in the near future to enable him to make more frequent visits to the various districts.

Special investigation of "Packing Houses and Storage Facilities," conducted by C. T. More. Mr. More is in Washington to consult with his chief regarding this work, after having made a preliminary survey of the situation in the northwest.

The head office is at Walla Walla, Wash., Paul H. Wewranch, president.

Irrigation Aids Fertilizing.

With irrigation farming it is possible to plow deeper and use larger amounts of manure than is possible in other kinds of farming, without danger of excessive looseness and drying out of the soil. This increased fertilization will in turn increase the water capacity, since the organic matter that is added is spongy and has a mellowing effect on the soil. The water capacity should be kept up, says W. L. Powers of the Oregon Agricultural College, so that the soil will hold the greatest possible amount of rainfall and irrigation water received.

Fine Progress on Crater Lake Road

When the road work being done in Crater Lake national park this season is completed only twelve miles of road will be left ungraded, according to Lieut. George E. Goodwin, United States army engineer in charge of the road construction. This remaining twelve miles will be part of the highway around the rim of the lake.

The work this year will be carried on until about November 1, or two weeks later than usual. At that time between forty-five and forty-six miles of highway will be graded and ready for pavement. It will extend from the top of Cloud Gap on the east to Lloa Rock on the west.

"The work this year has been particularly difficult and slow because of the character of the formations encountered," said Lieut. Goodwin this morning. "It is the heaviest and most spectacular of any, and extends for three or four miles."

After grading of all the highways throughout the park is completed next season, paving of the entire road will be begun. It is felt certain that the remaining twelve miles of grading can be finished next year.

"We were held up in our work this year because of a late season and because we can not get men to work on the roads," said Lieut. Goodwin. "We did not get started until August 5, and never did have all the men we wanted. Now we are working about 100 men, and easily could use another 100. We pay $2 a day and board, and can guarantee work for at least another month, and probably until November 1."—Klamath Falls Herald.

A Distinctive Reason

What is the chief reason for the superiority of Royal Baking Powder?

There are several good reasons, but there is one which distinguishes Royal from other baking powders.

This reason, which every woman should know, is that Royal Baking Powder is made from cream of tartar, which comes from grapes. This means a healthful fruit origin. It means natural food as distinguished from mineral substitutes used in other baking powders.

There is no alum nor phosphate in Royal Baking Powder.
