Growers Must Mark Fruit Shipped

The officials in charge of the enforcement of the food and drugs act report that inspectors have found several interstate shipments of packages of fruits and vegetables such as grapes, tomatoes and berries which contain no statement on the packages as to the quantity of contents. The net-weight amendment to the federal food and drugs act requires that all packages of foods which are shipped into interstate or foreign commerce must be marked plainly and conspicuously with a statement of the quantity of the net contents either by weight or measure. Shippers who violate the law by failing to mark the quantity of the contents of each package of fruits and vegetables they ship into interstate commerce are liable to criminal prosecution. Several shippers have already been cited to hearings under the food and drugs act for violating its provisions in this respect.

"A Shine in Every Drop"

Movie Matters

Friend Husband: Don't be surprised, a short time hence, if Friend Wife should say to you after the eggless, butterless breakfast one morning:

"John, I do wish you would bring home a couple of well-fed butterflies tonight!"

Don't think she may have a new scheme up her culinary sleeves with which to combat the soaring food prices. Far from it! Fashions is the word. You see Valeska Suratt, who is probably more famous for her gowns than her histrionic ability, has let it be known that she designs her own clothes—and further, that she gets her inspirations from butterflies in the museum of natural history.

"Nowhere," says Miss Suratt, "will you find anything so radiantly resplendent in color, so tremendously varied in design."

But—restrain that snicker, mere man—

"The butterfly can be used not merely for hints in making gowns; it can be also utilized to suggest figures and combinations of hues in Christmas neckties."

She's Violent.

Marie Dressler recently completed for the World corporation the first scenes for her new movie comedy, "Tillie Wakes Up." It's a sequel to the one in which she appeared with Charlie Chaplin, called "Tillie's Punctured Romance."

Johnny Hines appears in the new movie with her. An automobile was wrecked in the first scenes. And Mr. Hines didn't come out much better from the scenes in which he appeared with the impetuous Miss Dressler.

Unanimous.

June Caprice, who wears her curls in ringlets a la Pickford, has been told that a new baby, June Caprice Morrison, has been named after her by the baby's admiring mamma, Mrs. E. W. Morrison, 388 East Fifty-seventh street, Portland, Ore.

Miss Caprice says it's a particularly promising baby, an opinion in which she is said to be supported heartily by Mrs. Morrison.

Betty Schade has found her father. She lost him when the war started and, like Little Bo-Peep, she didn't know where to find him. Miss Schade has received a letter from her father, who is now safe and sound in his Chicago home. He says he was in the trenches for two years and that during the time of his service he never once was ill or wounded. Bully for papa!

Answer Is a Slap.

For the tenth time in her screen career Bessie Love becomes a bride. In her latest picture, "The Heiress at Coffee Dan's," she weds her musician sweetheart and they live happily ever after.

"I do wish they'd write a story in which I don't have to be married," she said to her director. "I think it would be perfectly lovely if I could have a boy friend and enjoy his company."

pany without getting all mixed up in a wedding. I think it is so stupid to get married. It spoils all the fun."

"But didn't you ever know a man you would like to marry?" asked Director Dillon.

"No, I don't," replied Miss Love. "I've had lots of nice boy friends, but if any one of them had asked me to marry him I would have slapped him."

New Woman For Bill.

Badman Bill Hart, who has probably had more rear views of a revolver than any other personage in the pictures, has a new leading woman, Mary MacIvor, who is only nineteen and who has never appeared on the stage. But she's sweet, and ambitious and willing to help out here and there, so why hold such a trivial thing as inexperience against her?

Incidentally, Badman Bill is quite handy to have around the premises when it comes to developing the female idea, and he prides himself on having cultivated the talents of Clara Williams, Enid Markey, Bessie Love and Margery Wilson.

Jack Livingston has been engaged to appear in support of Dorothy Dalton in the current Triangle play by Monte Jetterjohn, now being filmed under the direction of Reginald Parker. Margaret Thompson, Gertrude Claire and J. Barney Sherry also are in the cast.
