THE RED CROSS SOCIETY

In an age charged with being selfish, sordid and commercial there has grown up and developed the greatest organization for unselfish service the world has ever seen—the American Red Cross. The growth of the Red Cross Society is evidence not to be controverted that the spirit of service is strong in the hearts of the people of today. The work of the society demonstrates that there are thousands who are willing to devote their services to humanity, and the support given them by voluntary contributions shows that there are hundreds of thousands more who are willing to devote a portion of their means to the alleviation of suffering.

The activities of the Red Cross always have been generously supported by the American public, but only since "our own" soldiers began to take a place in the trenches alongside our allies has this support become bountiful. It is the suffering and comfort of the men from "our own neighborhoods" as well as the physical needs of our allies for which the Red Cross must now mobilize. The result—a greater and more imperative duty now confronts the givers in America.

No appeal to the generosity of the American people has ever been unanswered. Let one part of the world be visited by some calamity like the Mount Pelée and Italian earthquake, China floods, the Johnstown flood, the San Francisco earthquake, or any greifor or lesser calamity, and the response from the nation is immediate and generous to a degree. The services of the American Red Cross Society to both sides in the Boer war and in other wars was liberal and sacrificing. Fresher in our minds is the work the American unit has been doing in Europe in the last three years, especially the relief given the Belgian population.

To meet this new and greatly enlarged demand—this demand that has the added force of patriotism and a duty we owe our own soldiers—there has been a campaign to raise $100,000,000 for the Red Cross work. The campaign has been conducted with a vigor and earnestness that insured success. It was participated in by all classes of Americans from the president of the nation down to the smallest boy scout, and the women of the nation were particularly active.

"Red Cross Week" will not be the only time in which one can assist the work of the society. Each week should be a Red Cross week with those who are able to contribute to the work of this greatest agency of mercy. Its work is pressing and will continue a long time. It needs continued support and will not appeal in vain to a people as generous as the American nation.

DEFERENCE TO OUR NEIGHBORS

There should be a cordial interchange of pleasantries between the communities of Rogue river valley. The spirit that would form attractions on same dates simply to offset the possible success of attractions in other communities should be taboo. For example, the Ashland and Medford band concert dates should not conflict. Both have music par excellence and it would be a great pleasure to Ashland to drive down the valley and enjoy the concerts at Medford, and it should be the pleasure of Medford citizens to come to Ashland on concert dates to enjoy our hospitality. It should be borne in mind always that physical environment is such in this valley that unwarranted rivalry destroys. Cordial co-operation will put the whole valley forward as nothing else can do.

Ashland, Medford and Grants Pass are the chief cities. Each has its distinctive resources and attractions and each can well afford to boost the other, as well as itself, in its ambitions. Let's have an agreeable arrangement with Medford and Grants Pass along this line. Especially in relation to band concerts, county fair, Chautauqua, Marble Caves and Hyiu Hehe attractions. Let community co-operation be the watchword in the Rogue river valley. Then watch all of us grow.

DOES EVERYBODY KNOW YOU?

Some merchants say they don't need to advertise because everybody knows them.

Which reminds us of the time Wm. J. Bryan was being introduced, at a small-town Chautauqua in Nebraska, and the chairman asked him if he talked or sang.

THANKS, MEDFORD

Medford Sun: Ashland has the proper spirit whether it be Liberty bonds, Red Cross funds or the Fourth of July Roundup. No longer can Medford claim a monopoly of the progressive spirit.

Number 1 of Volume 1 of "Oregon Exchanges" a new paper edited by the senior class of Journalism of the University of Oregon for the newspaper men of the state and dealing with the problems and happenings in the Oregon newspaper world, has arrived on our exchange desk, and will be welcomed on each succeeding appearance.

Heard and Overheard

(By Lynn D. Mowat.)

About Being Late

Being late has its many advantages as well as vice versa. We are generally late at everything. We imagine when we die the papers will speak of "the Late Lynn Mowat."

But as we said before being late has its advantages, before you are dead as well as after.

For instance: We have saved almost $13.65 in the last year by being late in getting to Jean Hasting's barber shop and having to shave ourselves; we have saved $21.70 (admitting that we would have done without pie once) by putting off going to lunch until it was supper time on numerous occasions; we have saved ourselves an amount of uncomfortable-ness not easily estimated in figures by being late at banquets and missing speeches; so far whenever we have been late in getting to the station the train has been late, thus saving us many valuable hours waiting; we expect to be late at our own wedding (if we ever have one) thus enjoying single blessedness for a longer time; we would be late in getting to 1st company drills except for the fact that we have kidded ourselves into believing they start at 7:30 instead of 8 o'clock. At that we have had several close shaves and if somebody had not stuffed Meridith Beaver's bugle full of paper one night, causing last call to be five minutes behind time, we would have been courtmartialed or something; the only way we ever get to work on time is by sitting up all night and then the boss—contrary to his usual custom—stays home until noon and never knows about it. So, what's the use?

When we have croaked and met our fate

Saint Peter at the Golden Gate, Will have to have to stick around quite late

To let us in where angels wait.

We used to have a dandy time, Whenever we got hold of a dime. But now the world with war's afire, We find that having fun comes higher.

In regard to our inquisitive inquiry about half hose—L. G. Gleave says he would tell us the bare facts of the matter but we were too modest to listen.

With papers full of war and blood, And hurricanes, earthquake and flood, We give the front page short inspection

And hurry to the funny section; And as an antidote to grief In Hans and Fritz we find relief.

GOLD HILL ITEMS

The recent decision in the supreme court in this state of the Grand Prize Hydraulic Mines vs. Bowell, is of some importance to the miners in this region, which is as follows: A person locating as mineral land school land owned by the state of Oregon acquires only a temporary possessory right, subject to divestment by failure to purchase or lease the lands as required by the state law from the state land board. HAVE YOU BEEN SICK?

Then you realize the utter weakness that robs ambition, destroys appetite, and makes work a burden.

To restore that strength and stamina that is so essential, nothing has ever equaled or compared with Scott's Emulsion, because its strength-sustaining nourishment invigorates the blood to distribute energy throughout the body while its tonic value sharpens the appetite and restores health in a natural, permanent way.

If you are run down, tired, nervous, overworked or lack strength, get Scott's Emulsion today. It is free from alcohol. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

plaintiff assisted defendant in entering and leasing a mining claim actually within his owned staked claim, and later, when defendant struck pay ore, admitted in the presence of witnesses that the claim belonged to defendant and offered to buy it, plaintiff was estopped from claiming the property as his own. An interest in a mining claim must be created in writing and cannot be created by verbal option.

Mike G. Womack, the well known mine operator of Medford, with others have taken a lease on a very promising new strike recently made nine miles east of Ashland. The vein is quite rich with gold and platinum deposits and several feet wide, the extent of the find is yet unknown. The strike is on patented land owned by J. H. Elliott, and is accessible by a good wagon road. The lessees will begin operations on the property at once to determine the value and extent of the vein.

The women, and the boys and girls in this district have gone to the rescue of the orchardists of this section in thinning and picking fruit, and are doing excellent work. The women and girls donned overalls and go about the business of thinning the heavy laden trees in a way that betokens success. The operators throughout the valley would have been embarrassed for help just now without the assistance of the courageous young women and youngsters who have undertaken to supply the deficiency caused in the labor markets, caused by the heavy enlistments in the army and navy by the young men.

Teach Children Thrift.

We Americans are notoriously the most thrifless of peoples. You have heard how much we throw away. We are too prone to think of thrift as stinginess. We hate to hear about saving. Dorothy Canfield Fisher in her recent book, "Self Reliance," gives parents a strong word of warning. She says:

"There is nothing in the fact of being children which need cut off our sons and daughters from a great deal of accurate information and considerable practical experience with the ins and outs of wise money spending. But there is a great deal in the fact of their being Americans which will shut them off from such information and experience unless parents make a very determined effort to see that they get the proper training, for the whole spirit of our country and age is against us in the effort."

The City of the Dove.

When mighty Amru went to conquer Egypt he camped on the east bank of the Nile opposite Memphis, that great twenty mile long capital of mud bricks whose western verge was the pyramids and whose mud brick houses have all vanished. Amru crushed the Egyptians and came back to get his camp to move over and occupy Memphis. A dove had built in the folds near the top of his tent. Blood bathed Amru, the ruthless, would not let her be disturbed. A new city started about his tents. It grew northward along the Nile. It is today Cairo. Memphis is only a name.

To be driven off the range by an armed, masked rider within twenty miles of his own ranch, where he and his father have run stock for the last three decades, was the experience of Edward Egli of Harney county, who with Sheriff W. A. Goodman of Burns, was in Bend recently. Both Mr. Egli and the Harney county sheriff fear the beginning of another range feud, and Mr. Goodman is determined to find the rider and prevent a recurrence of the hold-up.
