

Mr. Tidings Wantad Makes Debut in Interest of Classified Advertisers

Having arrived to take charge of the classified columns of this great semi-weekly, it is up to me to spill a small gob of language over the premises. I modestly announce myself as the most amiable and efficient little auctioneer in captivity. This statement needs no proof. I admit it. At distributing small job lots of joy I am absolutely in a class by myself. If you want to buy, sell, rent or exchange anything, the easiest way for you to do it is to let me do it. All you need to do is to manufacture enough footprints to reach from your place to my headquarters at the Tidings office, ask for me, whisper your little tale of woe into my shell-like ear, slip me a thin fitney or so—I'll do the rest, and, believe me, I know just how to do it.

Try this on any day of the week—and watch this space for my little song and dance every week.

I thank you,
TIDINGS WANTAD.

 The undersigned has been duly appointed Administrator of said estate. Anyone having a claim against said estate is required to present the same, duly verified, at the Billings office, Ashland, Ore., within six months from the first publication hereof, which is September 24, 1917.

May Buckley, with the Shubert production of Eugene Walters' drama, "The Knife," which comes to the Page, Medford, Tuesday night, October 16.

 T. L. POWELL,
 36-5t-Mon. Administrator.

May Buckley At The Page

When Eugene Walter's virile drama of modern life comes to the Page Tuesday, October 16, the cast will disclose as leading woman Miss May Buckley, who has not been seen here in a very long time, but who is well remembered by southern Oregon theatergoers, to many of whom she positively endeared herself by her charming characterizations at the old Alcazar in San Francisco, before the fire.
 Miss Buckley went east with "The First Born," Francis Powers' famous Chinese play, which was first produced at the Alcazar. David Belasco produced it later in New York, with Miss Buckley in her original role of the slave girl. The actress captivated New York quite as thoroughly as did the unique play.
 Miss Buckley then played the leading feminine role with Wright Lorrimen in his mammoth production of "The Shepherd King," and from then on her career has been a series of triumphs.
 In "The Knife" Miss Buckley is said to do the best work she has yet given the stage. She plays a southern girl to whom misfortune comes in New York, and the great complexities of the character make great demands on the versatile abilities of the charming actress.
 Eugene Walter's plays, "Fine Feathers," "Paid in Full," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "The Wolf," had a warm welcome when they were sent on tour. "The Knife" is said to be his most virile and thrilling dramatic effort.
