Executive Department, Salem, Ore., Oct. 10, 1917.

Whereas, the American people have set themselves the task of raising a second Liberty Loan of from three to five billion dollars. Twentieth century war requires vast sums of money. The requirements are far beyond what the wealthiest country can raise by taxation. The great nations of Europe have been at war for three years. They have floated loan after loan successfully. It is unthinkable that this country should fall with its second loan, six months after the declaration of war; and

Whereas, failure to provide the necessary money would mean failure properly to provision and equip our troops. An army insufficiently equipped and supplied is led to unavailing slaughter. We owe to those who are to do the fighting to stand behind them loyally, to give them everything which will add to their efficiency and bring them nearer the day of victory. Let us not fight this war half-heartedly, with one hand behind our backs. Let us fight it manfully in a manner worthy the best traditions of the republic; and

Whereas, Oregon's share of the fund required is sixteen and a half to twenty-four million dollars. This is a sum too large to be raised without the co-operation of the whole people. Every Oregonian with an income should consider it a duty and a privilege to purchase one or more bonds, in proportion to his means. The government asks us not to contribute, but to invest. There is no safer investment in the world than a loan to the United States;

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority in me vested, as governor of the state of Oregon, I, James Withycombe, governor, do hereby proclaim the week of October 14 to 20, 1917, as Patriotic Week. Oregon has thus far responded to every appeal. We have given the flower of our young manhood. Let us not be a sordid people. Let us not place greater store by our money than by our men. If our people can only be aroused to the necessities of the situation we cannot fall to have the co-operation which will spell success.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the state of Oregon to be hereunto affixed this 10th day of October, A. D. 1917.

JAMES WITHYCOMBE, Governor.
