FOOD WILL WIN THE WAR

as his two-legged brother taps the maple for the sugar.

"After stripping off the bark, the bear licks the inside of the bark and also the peeled trunk of the tree until the sap is gone. Then he hunts another tree. The damage done this way ranges from mere scratches to the peeling of several square feet of bark.

"Sometimes the trees are completely girdled, in which case they soon die. In other cases, where the girdling is not complete, the trees exude a coat of pitch over the scar, making fine fuel for the first fire that comes along, which either burns the tree down or leaves a 'cat-face.'

"The fresh wounds made by the bears also offer a point of attack for fungi and insects."

In traveling one mile through second growth timber where bears were plentiful, Ranger Lickel observed more than one hundred fresh scars made by the animals in their quest for sap.

BOYS WHO PUT THE PLAN INTO PLANTING

Now is the time to begin making definite plans for the 1918 gardening campaign. The Boy Scouts of America did fairly well at this feeding-the-soldier business last year, considering they got into it rather late, but this year they hope to do twice as well, now that they know precisely how important food conservation and production is in this matter of war winning, which concerns all so vitally.

Do the Diggers!

Farmers, get busy. Now is the time. Poisoned grain furnished by the county at cost.

Fruit Association

Spray, Flour, Feed and Poultry Supplies.

There is every reason to believe that scouts are ready and eager to get at their new gardens, but they will need constructive, intelligent leadership to obtain the best results.

The smallest bit of enthusiasm or effort should be permitted to go to waste. Conservation of this sort is of the utmost importance.

In 1918 there shouldn't be "any such animal" as the vacant lot, and scouts can scarcely do better service than by helping in the extermination process. Get on the trail of the vacant lot. It is fair scout game.

It may be possible to persuade large manufacturing concerns to permit their unoccupied territory to be given over to their employees for cultivation. Scouts may make war garden speeches to these employees at noon recesses. A boy who can sell Liberty bonds and war savings stamps can probably present the necessity and responsibility for increasing food production effectively, especially if he can say he is war gardening himself "to beat the band," or rather the Boche.

ENLISTMENTS MADE IN NAVAL SERVICE

To keep up the complement of the ever-increasing navy, the department has again thrown down the bars for a short time and are seeking competent men who desire to enlist. Enlistments are being made in all the different branches of the service, except in some of the higher ratings. The term of enlistment is for four years, with active service for the duration of the war only. The naval reserve force offers exceptional advantages. The service and pay are identical with the regular navy, and as practically all the officers are selected from the ranks by competitive examinations, which are held three or four times a year, the chances for promotion and advancement are unequalled. Every man in the service is eligible to take this examination after from three to six months active duty and shows the proper aptitude for the work. Many of the men who entered the service at the outbreak of the war have commissions, and have been ordered to Annapolis for a short course of training and study in the special branches.

All of the navy recruiting officers are authorized to make enrollments, and as a result the number is increasing daily. Men of the draft age are accepted upon securing permission to enlist of their local draft board, under Section 151, Selective Service Regulations.

SLACKER HENS ARE SOLD IN CALIFORNIA

Food Administrator Hoover has prohibited the sale of all hens during the laying period. The California state food administrator has modified this ruling to permit the killing of slacker hens—non-laying fowls. The Oregon food administrator has refused to modify the Hoover ruling for Oregon hens and local poultry dealers claim this works an injustice on them and a discrimination in favor of California dealers.

The press dispatches state that the California food administration announced that on a written guarantee from the poultrymen, dealers may now accept from producers and kill non-laying fowls.

Dealers will be held accountable for the shipments being along the order lines and must be prepared at all times to produce the proper voucher that the fowls to be killed have failed in their egg-laying duty.

This order runs to April 30. It was made upon representations of a committee composed of Farm Adviser George Merrill of Sonoma county, F. A. Kippel and Milo S. Baker, who urged a change in the original order prohibiting selling of all fowls for market. They should that the poultrymen would be compelled at heavy expense to carry old fowls and pullets on account of the high cost of food.

Apples are 15 to 18 per cent food value, mostly sugar. Eat more of this fine Oregon fruit. Use apples for dessert, and save the wheat and sugar that would be used in pie or pudding. At the same time you'll be patronizing home industry and helping your health.

Constructive criticism will be welcomed by every government department; destructive fault-finding has no place in the American scheme of war. Unless you know that you can better existing conditions, can the fault-finding and back up your government.
