NORTH FORK OF ROGUE

IS CLOSED BY STATE

At the monthly meeting of the state fish and game commission at Portland Thursday, the North fork of Rogue river and its tributaries above the natural dam, including Union creek were closed to fishing for a period of three years to permit the restocking of the depleted streams to trout, says the Medford Mail Tribune. This month, 250,000 Rainbow trout fingerlings from the Spenced creek hatchery will be planted and a still greater number will be placed in the streams next year.

Complaint regarding conditions at Ament dam, which are again reported as bad, was ordered investigated and the state warden and his deputies in southern Oregon ordered to remove the obstruction and clear the river so that fish can ascend. It is reported that thousands of fish are being collected below the dam, all fishways are out of commission, and the only way fish can ascend is thru the aperture at the base of the dam, which is clogged by iron frame work, and but few fish succeed in making it. Poachers are busy and no attention paid to the laws.

The Ament dam is not used for water or power purposes, and has been for years a useless obstruction in the stream.

The Dalles will build a new school house on east hill.

In Parade On 4th

What the parade on the Fourth of July lacked in quantity it made up in quality. This feature of the celebration was under the auspices of the Women's Auxiliary Club, with Mrs. S. B. McNair as chairman, and their efforts were untiring to put on a parade such as had never before been presented in Ashland. Promises, however, are apparently only made to be broken, and at the last minute many who were expected to be present in the parade were conspicuous by their absence. While this defection on the part of the citizens was noticed by the lack of numbers in the parade, those who did respond made such an elegant appearance that they were received with acclaim by the spectators.

Headed by their beloved captain, C. A. Malone, Ashland's old First company appeared at the head of the parade, in their overseas uniforms. This was a sight that many had never expected to see, as two years ago this gallant company marched out of Ashland to face the fortunes of war, and the mothers and fathers who saw them go, had little hopes of seeing them with almost unbroken numbers safe at home again. And the streets re-echoed with the cheers that greeted the return of this company of local heroes, with, alas! broken ranks to be sure, but with the same gallant bearing and undaunted spirits with which they marched away. Ashland's debt of gratitude to her boys was only feebly demonstrated by the cheers of welcome with which she saw them returned again.

The uniformed ranks were followed by the decorated floats, automobiles and other features of the parade. The foremost of these was the Victory float arranged by the Eastern Star. This was an immense chariot of white and gold, drawn by two white horses driven by Clyde Torrence, a returned sailor, and led by returned soldiers. Standing on a pedestal holding aloft the American flag, the great symbol of victory, was the Goddess of Victory, represented by Miss George Coffee. Accompanying the Goddess of Victory were two soldiers in overseas uniforms representing the brave men who gave their lives for the protection of the country. Then came the Medford band, the Red Cross canteen float driven by Mrs. H. G. Enders, Jr., the Ashland Memorial float driven by Mrs. W. H. McNair, the Ashland War Chest driven by W. H. McNair, the Women's Relief Corps float driven by Mrs. G. M. Robinson, the G. A. R. rifle and drum corps, the Ashland band, the decorated cars of Mayor C. B. Lamkin and Mrs. Myrtle Boslough, the George Washington car arranged by Mrs. Coffee and Mrs. E. H. Bush and driven by Mrs. Bert Smith, the cars of Mrs. Millner, Mrs. O. R. Kluth, Dr. E. A. Woods, Mrs. Fry of Astoria, the Rebekah float, horseback riders, Boy Scouts, Valley Candy Company, the Natatorium orchestra, Emil Peil's agricultural implement display and the roundup riders.

The parade formed on Helman and Mechanic streets, headed north. Led by Chief Marshall F. C. Homes, the pageant started south to the Plaza, then east to the Hawthorne school house, where it counter-marched to the central part of the city and disbanded.

Following were the prize winners in the parade:
Best decorated Ford car—First prize, a memorial card, Mrs. Charles Pierce; second, Rebekah float.
Best decorated Overland—First prize, Mrs. Millner.
Societies, organizations, etc.—First prize, Rebekah float; second prize, Women's Relief Corps.

Individual cars—First prize, Mrs. Bonjough; second prize, Mrs. Bert Smith.

Merchants, Industrial, etc.—First prize, Emil Peil; second prize, Natatorium.

Best lady saddle horse—First prize Violet Woods.

Only one pony saddle horse entered the parade and as this had no patriotic decorations of any sort, it was ruled out.

The prize for the best decorated front or window of the business houses fell to the J. H. McGee dry goods store, with the Boot Shop a close second.

LARGE CROWDS GOING TO ELKS' CONVENTION

Reports from virtually every Elks lodge in Oregon received during the past week by Dr. William S. Kennedy, president of the Oregon State Elks association, indicate an unusually large attendance at the state Elks convention, August 14, 15 and 16, at Klamath Falls.

E. B. Hall, chairman of the Klamath Falls convention committee, says that a huge park in Klamath Falls will be fitted up with tents for the accommodation of more than a thousand of the visitors. These tents will be served with hot and cold water and virtually every convenience of a large hotel. The White Pelican hotel is the convention headquarters and all accommodations in this and the Hall hotel have been reserved.

The citizens of Klamath Falls, in an earnest endeavor to co-operate with the convention committee have listed their rooms for the benefit of the visitors, altho Klamath Falls expects to be the host to the greatest number of people ever within its gates, all will be furnished with accommodations.

spots of the Klamath country, and a barbecue on the upper Klamath lake at which time a vaudeville show staged by the lodges of Oregon will be a feature, are planned as features for the visitors. In Klamath Falls each night a carnival spirit will prevail with street dancing and the old-time street fun prevalent at all times. The convention session promises to be an interesting one, with well-known speakers from Oregon and Washington on the program. The convention follows by one month the grand lodge convention in Atlantic City, and inasmuch as the state associations are sanctioned by the grand lodge, it is probable that the Oregon Elks association will have considerable work to decide upon in following recommendations expected to be made at the national convention.

The Klamath Falls convention marks the annual meeting of the association, and President Kennedy, as well as other officials of the association, looks forward to three days of pleasure personified and in addition an important session of interest to every man who wears the antlers in the state of Oregon.

J. BEESON WINS PARK TENNIS TOURNAMENT

John Beeson of Talent will have his name engraved on the Lithia Park Tennis cup as the winner of the second tournament held here. In 1917, Adams of Talent, won the singles championship. Since then he lost in a greater tournament and will have a gold star placed after his name on the cup. Mr. Adams enlisted in the flying corps and was killed in an aeroplane accident in England. Last year there was no tournament.

Beeson at one time was regarded as one of the best tennis players in Oregon and those who saw the exhibition he put up Saturday are unwilling to concede that he could not give the best of them a run for their money despite the fact that he has played very little tennis for two years. Steady as a rock, he kept the younger players who faced him dashing from corner to corner until a well placed smash scored the point. Kincaid, an Ashland boy, was runner-up and provided the sensation of the affair by defeating Hyde, the Oregon Agricultural College champion. Hyde's downfall may be partially charged to lack of practice, but this should not detract from the showing made by Kincaid who is a comer. The local boy played a fast game in the finals against Beeson and forced the Talent player to extend himself to the limit.

There was insufficient time to finish the doubles scheduled and Allen and Kincaid of Talent were the lucky ones in the drawing to decide the winner.

Interest in tennis has been dormant during the war years, but with this summer quite a number of tennis players are working out on the Lithia park courts and the game promises to come back into its own. The lower court in the park has been oiled and with a good rolling will be ready for play.

Saturday's tournament resulted as follows. Kincaid beat Gleim, Hyde beat E. Beeson, J. Beeson beat Hyde, Kincaid beat Allen, J. Beeson beat Kincaid.

State Highway board will let contracts July 8th, for 156 miles highway.
