Chautauqua Dome Can Represent Sky

"The men who planned this Chautauqua auditorium must have had a great vision," remarked Dr. A. D. Carpenter, the renowned astronomer who was the speaker at the Chautauqua assembly Saturday afternoon. "What an opportunity to study the heavens this great dome would afford," he further remarked. "I can plan it out. A design of the firmament with the various constellations, the northern cross, the big dipper, the more prominent stars depicted, it would be a wonderful opportunity for the youth to study astronomy."

Dr. Carpenter sketched a plan whereby the dome could be divided in sections, representing the heavens in the four seasons of the year, with electrical arrangements showing the rising and setting of the moon. This is the most wonderful building of the kind Dr. Carpenter has ever seen, and his line of research immediately peopled the vast expanse of ceiling with the heavenly vision of the reproduction of the heavenly visitants.
