The play attracted a large aucupied by A. R. Cyrus' real estate dience and all were pleased with their entertainers. The play itself is of the kind that the average theater-goer enjoys and most of the players handled White Collar line for Portland and way well their parts. There were one or two exceptions, but on the whole the drama was well rendered. The specialties were unusually good and of a very catchy order. The "colored quartette" were repeatedly encored and made a big hit. The success of last night's performance ensures a big crowd for "Fogg's Ferry," this evening.
