Yesterday the father and brother of the missing Albert Love were again in the city. It was their firm belief that the missing man had been shanghaied and was held on one of the outbound ships. They visited the vessels in company with Sheriff Linville, who has been giving them every assistance possible in their sad mission, but could not find the object of their search. The father has reluctantly come to the conclusion that his son was drowned.

The motormen on Astoria street-cars did not enjoy Thanksgiving day. All day long the rain drove in fierce gusts against them as they stood unprotected on the car platform. Rubber coats and "slickers" were no protection, and the motormen were wet to the skin all day. Then they had other troubles. With their hats pulled down on their foreheads and their heads bowed to the storm they simply saw the track ahead of them and often passed waiting passengers fifty feet or more before they noticed the passengers were there. The latter would walk up to the car and say unpleasant things to the motorman. The street-car driver doesn't get the cream of the milk of human kindness.

CAPTAIN HARRIMAN HERE.

He Describes the Rescue of the Lightship Crew on North Beach.

Captain Joseph Harriman, master of lightship No. 50, that went ashore Wednesday night came over from Fort Canby yesterday and was seen by an Astorian representative last night.

Captain Harriman and his children are staying at Mrs. Pondleton's, and when the Astorian man called Dr. Tuttle was examining the captain's injuries which are by no means slight. Besides a general snaking up experienced in his wild ride the captain was one time swept off the skylight onto the deck, severely wrenching his back. He will be unfit for duty, Dr. Tuttle says, for some time.

The captain was modest in the recital of his thrilling experience but he was warm in the praise of the coolness and bravery exhibited by his men.

"The experience was certainly unpleasant," he said, "but at no time did I think we were lost. My experience as a bar pilot made me familiar with the coast and I knew that there was just one place to go. Above that place or below it meant certain death, but I knew my ship and my men worked faithfully and I felt confident we could make the bit of beach that promised safety."

"When the Esport's hawser parted and the tug steamed away, we crowded on all our canvases and made for the shore and the vessel struck where we were so anxious to have her strike."

"The first projectile fired by the life-saving crew of course we could not see for the line was not attached, but the second shot was perfectly aimed and went right over the center of the lightship. We sent Enberg ashore first for he had been badly injured and was suffering greatly."

"After he started I went down to the cabin to change my clothes for I had been in the water all day. The men didn't like the idea of going below and preferred remaining on deck. I went down, turned on the radiator, for I was chilled through and through and put on dry clothes."

"When I reached the deck there was but one man there, the rest having rode the breeches buoy to dry land. You didn't go and change your clothes?" asked this man. "Indeed I did," I answered. "Humph," said he, "you only get wet again." And wet I did get, too.

"This man went ashore, and I was alone, and in truth, that was the most lonesome moment I have ever known. All the lights on board were extinguished except a lantern which I held and the night was dark as ink. I mounted the rigging with difficulty for I was sore and my back bothered me. Besides the wind was blowing hard and I had to hold the lantern in one hand, for that was the only means of signalling to the life-crew."

"I had considerable trouble getting into the breeches buoy, but finally succeeded, then I signalled with the lantern that I was ready, and threw the lantern away. I was hauled quickly to land, although I was under the water for 20 or 30 feet."

"You cannot say too much in praise of the life saving crew. I cannot express what I feel. We shall never forget them—never. I also wish to mention the kind treatment accorded us at the hospital and the good work of Dr. Storey."

Joe Leonard was hit by the wheel when it struck Enberg and he was bruised up but no bones were broken. Leonard, with a line fast to him, went sprawling on the water-swept deck and was completely hidden by the water, for a little while, but he reached up and waved his hand to let them know that he was all right.

A NOVEL PLAN.

Proposal to Save the Lightship by Hauling Her over the Ridge.

Captain Taussig, U. S. N., the government inspector, Captain Gregory, of the Manzanita, and Captain Richardson of the Columbine went to Fort Canby on the Electric yesterday and visited the beached lightship.

The vessel has swung around and is now lying broadside to the sea but she still shows no signs of material damage.

Captain Taussig has ordered everything portable taken out of her and an anchor will be carried out as far as possible at extreme low water and it is thought that the lightship lightened and swinging on the anchor line will come in and hold her head to the sea.

First Officer Byrne, of the Columbine, will go over today and take charge of the vessel.

It is not yet known whether the attempt to save the lightship will involve towing her over through the breakers or hauling her over Iliwaco peninsula and launching her in Baker's bay.

The latter plan appears extraordinary to say the least, but contractor Lebeck, of Astoria, who has conferred with the government officers has an idea that it can be done. The distance over the ridges is about one-third of a mile and the elevation at the highest point about 50 feet. Mr. Lebeck is going over to look into the matter.

All Astorians who visit Portland and desire spending a pleasant evening in company with polite people and in the enjoyment of an unexcelled musical program, should go to the Fredericksburg. Besides vocal and instrumental selections there are many other attractions to delight the visitor. The new management is making the Fredericksburg a well-merited success. BROWN & GRANT, Props.

THEN AND NOW.

To say that a man has Bright's disease was once considered equivalent to saying that he stood in the valley of the shadow of death. The end was only a question of time. But that was before Warner's Safe Cure had spread its benefits over the land.

C. H. Lincoln, of Medford, Mass., says:

"I had typhoid fever, and after it came kidney trouble, and it was whispered around that I had Bright's disease of the kidneys. I knew what that meant, so I pitched the medicine I had outdoors. I then bought one bottle of Warner's Safe Cure, and took it according to directions. The first bottle gave me relief and I bought a second. Before that was gone I had gained nearly ten pounds. I continued taking Safe Cure, and it cured me."

"I am fifty-nine years old, and enjoy as good health as any man of my age. If anyone has kidney trouble and Warner's Safe Cure will not cure him, nothing will. I believe it the best and only cure for kidney disease on earth."

Nowhere does the proverb, "Delays are dangerous," apply with such force as in kidney derangement. When Bright's disease has set in the kidney tissue is breaking down and passing away every minute. The strength of the body is sapped steadily, surely.

Inasmuch as Warner's Safe Cure alone stops kidney degeneration, should it not be used without an hour's delay when pain in the back and head, a cold skin and bad digestion give unmistakable warning?
