The habit of some fishermen of bringing their boats into any dock, regardless of steamers' rights at the place of landing, is going to result in an all round smash up some of these days. The friends of Edward Jones, the logger, who was crushed to death on Deep river on Friday night last, while coupling cars, are indignant at the manner in which the undertaking establishment in Astoria is run. The fishing schooner Jessie came in to port yesterday afternoon at 4:30 with about seven tons of halibut, all of which had been caught since last Saturday morning. The Jessie left out about a month ago and would not have returned without a full load had it not been for the fact that her supply of ice gave out. The schooner spent most of her time cruising about for profitable fields and did not make her catch until reaching the banks off Cape Flattery.

She was a sweet young thing, and the passengers on the street car looked amused when she laid her pretty, curly head upon his manly breast. One by one she stole upward and softly caressed his cheek. He did not seem to be in the least embarrassed by these attentions and smiled lovingly in acknowledgement of them. The others in the car looked on approvingly, and even smiled at the tokens of affection on the part of the two. Evidently they loved each other dearly. Every line in the man's strong face showed this; and the girl, well, unless appearances were deceiving, she simply returned his affection. And so they caressed each other until the car had brought itself to a stop in Uppertown, when the little miss slipped off the seat to the floor, and slipping her dainty hand into that of her father, she liped, in her sweetest three-year-old lip: "Tum, Papa, time to go home."

The Columbia came in from San Francisco at an early hour Sunday morning and was at once placed under quarantine restrictions by State Health Officer Fulton and Quarantine Officer Hastings. It was found that no sickness existed on board and the steamer was permitted to proceed to the O. R. & N. dock, where she discharged a large part of her miscellaneous cargo. Two Chinese passengers, however, were obliged to leave the vessel and go to the quarantine station as a precaution against possible infection from the plague, which now exists in San Francisco. They will be detained twelve days when, if they develop no symptoms, they will be permitted to proceed to Portland. All Chinese coming from San Francisco in the future will be detained at the quarantine station until the embargo is removed from San Francisco as an infected port.

FISHERMEN ARRESTED. Were Fishing Without Having Paid the State License—Two of the Prisoners Escape but Are Recaptured.

The police patrol established on the river by Fish Commissioner Reed, made its first haul yesterday. Four unlicensed boats, with two men in each boat, were seized and brought into port. One of the boats belongs to Sanborn's cannery; another to the combine and the other two were owned by the men who were working them. The arrest was made by Deputy Fish Commissioner Loughery.

When Deputy Commissioner Loughery arrived in port with his four captured boats and his eight prisoners, he found a crowd awaiting him at the docks, the news of the arrests having been brought ashore by a half dozen swift sailing boats. As the deputy started to push his way through the crowd, his prisoners following him, two of the latter broke away and ran. The officer made no attempt to recapture the men at the time but later on re-arrested both of them and they may have to pay dearly for their breach of promise to the officer to quietly submit to arrest.

The six fishermen, whose names could not be learned, were taken to the court of Justice of the Peace Brower and informed of the charge against them, which was violating a state law by fishing without a license. At first the fishermen were disposed to regard their arrest in the light of a joke, but when they learned that it would cost them $2.50 each to release their boats and nets—the lowest fine permissible under the law being $50, and the license, which they should have paid, being $3.00—the arrests did not appear so much of a joke.

The arrests were due in a large measure to information furnished Deputy Loughery by fishermen who had paid their license and insisted that all other fishermen should do the same. The fishermen are against the license law almost to a man, but those who believe in being law abiding citizens are determined that every man who fishes in the Columbia shall pay for the privilege.

ANTI-CAPPER CAMPAIGN!
