There should be no hesitation or uncertainty on the part of the water commission in disposing of the electric light question at tonight's meeting.

According to the representation of the West Shore Mills Company, and as a reason why it demands a five-year contract at an advanced rate over that heretofore paid for street lights.

ed rats and the people will be worse off than under existing circumstances. In other words, if the people are to be taxed to build another light plant or even to renovate the old one, let the money be invested in a public plant, which will be the property of the people when paid for.

The only argument heard against the ownership of a public electric light plant is that: the West Shore Mills Company would lose its investment in the present plant if the city went into competition with it in the electric lighting. It is urged, that is to say, that the people are under some sort of obligation to support the West Shore Mills Company and have no right to emancipate themselves from that obligation by building and operating their own plant.

If the West Shore Mills Company has a right to levy taxes on the people, to repay its investments and obligations incurred on account of its attempted monopoly of the lighting business, let the water commission appraise and pay for its antiquated electric plant and throw such portions of it as are not adapted to modern use into the river.
