These are the facts: 'The Astorian' is a newspaper published in Astoria, Oregon. The text provided is a snippet from a historical issue of the newspaper, containing various articles and advertisements. The text includes information about local events, political matters, and advertisements for goods and services. The newspaper appears to be from the turn of the 20th century, as indicated by the typography and format of the content. The text is not transcribed in its entirety, but it is clear that the document is a newspaper page featuring articles and advertisements typical of that era. The content includes notices, editorials, and advertisements for various goods and services.