For President

WILLIAM McKinLEY, Of Ohio.

For Vice-President

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Of New York.

Portland is at last beginning to appreciate her situation with respect to commerce and transportation foretold by the Astorian years ago. How her leading business lights and great newspaper used to deride the Astorian for its earnest warnings of the fate which is now about to overtake her. How often has the Astorian stated that the chains of commercial bondage were being slowly but inexorably forged about her. First she lost her Alaska business. Then the Puget sound roads began to divert the growing traffic of the Orient, until finally, there was no foreign commerce entering the Columbia river except as ballast, for returning grain cargoes. All the time Portland had the means at hand to maintain and even increase her commercial supremacy. She still remained the terminus—as for that matter she does today—the junction point, of the only down-grade railroads, traversing the entire length and breadth of the only two productive areas of country in the Pacific Northwest. She had the advantage of location at the confluence of the two mightiest rivers of the Pacific slope, flowing through both the same two only productive sections. Yet her business men, and her Chamber of Commerce, continued under the dominance of her commercial enemies. Trade which belonged of right to Portland, under the immutable laws of Divine Providence, was stolen from her—fled right under her nose—by her rivals north and south. Still her people slept in blissful ignorance. Still they listened to the soothing lullaby of her great newspaper. Still the picture was held up to the imagination of her people of Portland as a great seaport, one hundred miles up the crooked and shallow channel of the Willamette river. Still the tables were periodically paraded by the members of the wheat and transportation combination who controlled her Chamber of Commerce and only newspaper showing her greatness in comparison with other Pacific coast ports in foreign (grain) shipments. The Philippine war came on, and with it all the government's bustle and preparation for the despatch of transports loaded with soldiers and munitions of war across the Pacific. Portland got left. She was only a grain station on one or two transcontinental railway side-tracks. She had no facilities for carrying on general commerce—SHE HAD NO CITIZENS ENGAGED IN THAT BUSINESS. The government naturally went where the urgency of its needs could be best satisfied. Portland howled; and the influence of the Portland delegation in congress induced the government to send a regiment of troops and a cargo of two miles by way of Portland. Everyone knows the consequence. How battles were fought; soldiers killed and starved to death for lack of reinforcements and food stuck on the sand bars between the sea and the inland town of Portland. The experiment of sending troops and supplies to Manila via Portland has not been repeated. It never will be. The government spent from January to January last year over $30,000,000 in San Francisco in connection with its Asiatic military operations. This was independent of the vast sums spent privately by civilians and the thousands of officers and soldiers who went to the Philippines by that route. At Seattle and Tacoma a moderate estimate of the government's expenditures is $10,000,000. Portland in its rage has blamed the administration. The president, his official advisers, and high officers in the army have been abused and reviled by Portland's great newspaper, but government transports sail from Puget Sound and San Francisco. Why? Because the government wants to do business, and its business can't be done from Portland. Now the climax has come. Portland's grain trade is to be transferred to Puget Sound—and that by the manipulation of the very men who have been feted, flattered, petted and exhibited as the lions of Portland's business and social world. But let no blame be attached to Messrs. Balfour, Guthrie & Co., Kerr, Gifford & Co., and W. W. McNear. They can do more business in the nice, new and modern warehouses which the Northern Pacific railroad rents them at a "nominal" price at Tacoma, than they could do at Portland. Like the Alaska traders—the importers and exporters of Oriental goods, like the government and all the rest who want to do business in "ships that (can) go down to the sea," they have only exercised their moral and legal right to leave a distant inland river town for the advantages of a seaport. Poor old Portland; poor old Portland Chamber of Commerce; poor old hood-winked, moss-back town-let-booming Portland business ("3" men) The end of their day-dreams is not merely beginning, it has already come.
