THE BUDGET'S TELEGRAPH.

The Astoria Evening Budget again informs an expectant world that it always aims to publish the news twelve hours ahead of its contemporaries. How well it succeeds in its ambitious aim is proven by an examination of yesterday's issue. The longest dispatch published therein, which is but little shorter than all the rest of its yesterday's dispatches combined, was copied verbatim et literatim from yesterday's Astorian. Half the short dispatches which the Budget printed were also published yesterday morning, and the correct date, Aug. 14, was changed to Aug. 15, that they might appear as fresh news, in accordance with the Budget's usual honorable (?) policy in this particular, to which we have formerly called notice.

These are facts the accuracy of which may be easily proven by a few moments of investigation.

MOST FAVORED NATION CLAUSE.

A correspondent thinks that if all tariffs were removed from commerce between the mainland and the Philippines all nations with which we have treaties containing the "most favored nation clause" would also be entitled to free entry for their goods. Our correspondent appears to be thinking of the Philippines as a foreign country, a conception which the "Chronicle" does not concede to be accurate. We regard the Philippine archipelago as part of the United States and trade between the islands and the mainland as internal commerce in no way affected by treaty stipulations. If the Philippines were a foreign nation the situation, if duties were removed, would be similar to that between Hawaii and the United States before annexation and under the reciprocity treaty. No nation which that treaty was in force claimed the right to have its goods enter this country free of duty by right of the favored nation clause. This clause is substantially the same in all general treaties which we have made with foreign governments. The clause in the treaty with Russia reads as follows: If either party shall, hereafter, grant to any other nation any particular favor in navigation or commerce, it shall, immediately, become common to the other party, freely, where it is freely granted to such other nation, or on yielding the same compensation where the grant is conditional.

Advertisement for Beecham's Pills, describing its benefits for various ailments like constipation, indigestion, and general weakness.

From this it will be seen that even a most favored nation clause would convey no rights either there or in our home ports, except upon yielding the precise compensation which has passed between us and the Philippines. It is obvious that this is impossible, and as a matter of fact this celebrated clause amounts to little or nothing between strong nations, in its effect on tariffs. Special treaties are constantly made which ignore it. It insures equality of port dues and similar matters, and is enforced against China and other weak or weakly governed nations to secure equal tariffs.—San Francisco Chronicle.

The Chronicle forgets that in our treaty with Spain we agreed to give that country the same trade privileges in the Philippines that we ourselves "could enjoy, and that, consequently, whether the Philippines be considered as part of the United States or not, free trade with them means free trade with Spain and, under the "most favored nation clause," free trade with the rest of the world.

Furthermore, free trade between America and the Philippines and between Spain and the Philippines would mean free trade between Spain and America and, consequently, between the whole world and America, with the Philippines as a port of transshipment.

There is no necessity for free trade between America and the Philippines, in fact, the interests of American labor demand that the products of the cheap labor of the far East should be excluded by high protective barriers. We have proven in the case of Porto Rico that such a tariff can be constitutionally imposed, and the demand for such restrictions upon the importation of Asiatic products is far more imperative than it ever could be on the imports from Porto Rico.

The "most favored nation clause" is not a dead letter, as The Chronicle would have us believe, and if we try a closed door program in the Philippines we will soon learn that it is a very live corpse.

PORTLAND AS A WHEAT MARKET.

Tacoma Ledger. President Melien has written a letter to the Oregonian in which he tells the people of Portland some very plain truths, if they will but comprehend them.

The relations heretofore subsisting between the Northern Pacific and the O. R. & N. have been dissolved for the reason that the Northern Pacific has its own line from Eastern Washington to Portland and its freight business is still far less than the capacity of the road. It has heretofore allowed the O. R. & N. $1.75 per ton on wheat delivered to it at Wallula to haul to Portland. The O. R. & N. has charged $1.50 per ton for hauling from Portland to Albia all wheat brought over its own lines. There was left to it then only 25 cents per ton for the long haul from Wallula to Portland.

This arrangement the Northern Pacific will endure no longer. It has not cancelled its wheat rate to Portland and will not do so, but it will no longer pay this extortionate charge for hauling its own cars across the river at Portland to its wheat elevator. It will deliver wheat at its own terminals in Portland at the same rate charged to Tacoma, but it will do no more. It will not pay $1.50 per ton more for delivering it there than at its own warehouses in Tacoma, the business nearer the point where the business originates.

"It has a large concentration of terminal property at Tacoma—much larger than at any other point," says Mr. Melien, "and economy is always the result of concentration of property and business, if the business is efficiently handled." "The Northern Pacific," he also says, "was not built as a feeder to any other railroad but to do its own business at its own terminals in its own way," and as further showing the absurdity of submitting longer to what it has so long endured at Portland he points out that it can now deliver wheat at Astoria cheaper than at Portland.

Commenting on this the Oregonian reaches this curious conclusion, which it explains with all the emphasis of very black type: "What Oregon needs is people; people tilling its valleys, shearing its sheep and fattening cattle on its hills, digging coal, iron and gold out of its mountains and making lumber out of its forests, shoes out of its hides, clothing out of its wool."

We may admit that the Oregonian is right for once. The agricultural resources of Oregon are very great. It has much to hope from their development. It has little to hope for from commerce, because nature has placed obstacles in the way of it that are almost insurmountable. The railroads cannot overcome these, and will not much longer try to do so. Their business can be done far more cheaply through the natural channels, and through these channels it will certainly be done.
