The British-Boer war is ended again.

Another triumph of American diplomacy! Japanese labor has been driven from Astoria's streets.

The central source of lying dispatches concerning the operations in China appears to have been shifted from Shanghai to St. Petersburg.

The prize-fight tonight promises to be unusually interesting. Corbett is scheduled to win inside of twenty-five rounds and McCoy inside of twelve.

The fragility of the Franco-Russian alliance is clearly shown in the likelihood of its going to smash at the mere proposal of Russia to float a loan in Paris.

Negro Bishop Walters talks sensibly when he says that he does not see how the negro can consistently help the Democratic party into power. It is one of the amazing features of the present political situation that members of the race which the Democratic party has sought every opportunity to insult and degrade can be found giving that party their support.

The tales of the looting of Tien Tsin by European and American soldiers read like mediaeval history. The English officers, who were sent there to protect life and property, and, incidentally, to show the Chinese how to carry on civilized warfare, "rode with their horses concealed under dry-goods boxes" filled with plunder from native shops. "The Japanese did the least looting." In the coming century is the white race to acknowledge the civilization of the tawny Jap as of a higher type than our own?

WOLSELEY AND THE MILITIA.

San Francisco Chronicle.

Lord Wolseley has probably stirred up a hornets' nest through his severe criticism of the British militia in his address to an army corps of 30,000 of them which he reviewed last week at Aldershot. A London correspondent sums up the harangue as a declaration in brief that this army of militiamen is unfit for service. The British commander-in-chief charged them with being inefficient in training, "the most wretched objects imaginable, undersized, narrow-chested, flabby in muscle and quick only in that form of intelligence which city life develops even in the city drab." He attributed all this to the conditions which have been the means of congregating the population in the centers of industry. He admitted that there is the making of soldiers, probably, in every one of them, but time has not been given to complete the process.

It will be noted that there is a strong resemblance between Wolseley's arraignment of the British militiaman and that which was passed upon the young men who left their desks and counters in the great cities of the North to join the federal armies in the civil war. They were stigmatized and reviled as "counter jumpers." Men of their physique and habits of life were considered incapable of enduring the hardships and privations of war on an equal footing with those who had been raised in the country who were accustomed to hard labor and in possession of robust bodies and strong constitutions. But it was the despised "counter jumper" who evinced the greatest capacity for hard service and who suffered least from the privations of campaigning. The irregular habits of city life seemed to have fitted him for service in the field. He adapted himself more readily and with less suffering to the duties of army life than the recruit from the country districts, whose daily routine has been strictly regular—rising with the sun and retiring with its setting. There were proportionately many more wrecks among the latter than there were among the former.

Something similar was noticeable in the volunteers who served in the late war with Spain and in the subsequent campaign in the Philippines. The puny stripling who left a city clerkship to take up arms made equally as good, if not a better, soldier than the man who hailed from the country. Once the "counter jumper's" muscles became set, he proved himself fit for anything. Exercise hardened his muscles, gave his lungs a chance to dilate and his narrow chest disappeared. The majority of those who returned from the war came home as fine specimens of physical and soldierly perfection.

Perhaps Wolseley's standard of soldierly perfection is that which the continental armies have developed through a system which England has scrupulously avoided. His criticism may have been prompted also by the treatment which the war office has accorded him since hostilities in South Africa began. He has been practically ignored from the start and is probably crusty over it. No doubt that the Boer war has drained the country of the flower of its youth, as the pick of its yeomanry have been sent to the front. But there is just as good material for field service in the despised narrow-chested and flabby-muscled youth from the cities, after he has passed through the hardening process, as there is in the tanned and brawny son of the sod from the rural districts.

It is Incontrovertible!

The Editor of the "Christian Million," under the heading of General Notes, on August 20, 1896, wrote:—

"A good article will stand upon its own merits, and we may rely upon it that nothing will continue long which does not, in a more or less degree, harmonize with the statements which are published concerning it."

Mr. Hall Caine,

Author of "The Deemster," "The Manxman," "The Christian," etc., when speaking on "Criticism," recently, said:—

"When a thing that is advertised greatly is good it goes and goes permanently; when it is bad, it only goes for a while: the public finds it out."

The Proprietor of

has said over and over again:—

"It is a fallacy to imagine that anything will sell just because it is advertised. How many nostrums have been started with glare and strutted out in gloom? The fact is, a man is not easily gulled a second time; and every dissatisfied purchaser does ten times more harm than one satisfied does good. Assuredly the sale of more than 6,000,000 boxes of BEECHAM'S PILLS per annum, after a public trial of half-a-century, is conclusive testimony of their popularity, superiority and proverbial worth."

Beecham's Pills have for many years been the popular family medicine wherever the English language is spoken, and they now stand without a rival. In boxes, 25 cents and 50 cents each, at all drug stores.
