A question that is receiving considerable attention at present is that of having a relief lightship with auxiliary power to enable it to take the place of any of the three lightships on this coast, in case of one of them becoming disabled from any cause. At present, of the three lightships, one is being repaired in San Francisco harbor, one is stranded at McKenzie Head at the mouth of the Columbia, and the remaining one at Umatilla reef has only just been returned to her moorings after having broken loose in a recent gale. The lightships are marked as being in position, on the chart of every vessel that comes to this coast from a foreign port and disaster and loss of life are sure to ensue unless some precautionary measure is taken. In fact, several disasters and narrow escapes are already reported. The big Austrian steamer Otga, in foggy weather, trying to pick up the San Francisco lightship, which was in port undergoing repairs, went ashore near the Cliff house; the Glaucus, also in a fog, missing pilots and lightship, nearly suffered the same fate. The General Millinet, which arrived in at this port on Saturday, was fortunately warned by the pilot boat just in time to prevent her going ashore on the spit. The shipping men and the business men of the coast are vitally interested in this question and should see that the needed legislation is properly urged.

UNDER TWO TARIFFS.

Boston Journal.

Mighty little is being heard now of the tariff in its relation to the wool and woolen interests of the country.

The organs and the politicians that used to make it their chief business to denounce the "atrocious" protective duties and to demand "free wool" are discreetly silent. That agitation is dead. We hear no more of the manufacturers; we hear no more of the vast foreign markets that America could command if it were not for the "oppressive" duties on the raw material of woolen making. The reason why the political foes of American woolen manufacturing and wool growing have become dumb is written in the cold facts of our actual experience.

There never was a more grotesque pretense than that of the "tariff reformers" of six or seven years ago that free wool would not only give the American mills command of their home market, but immediately develop an enormous export trade in woolen fabrics. Grotesque though this pretense was, however, it fooled the country in 1890 and in 1892. In 1894 the Gorman-Wilson tariff, embodying this free wool notion, became the law of the land.

Now, did this free wool tariff give American wool manufacturers command of the home market? Did it open to them great and rich markets abroad? Let the treasury statistics tell their illuminating story. For the first eight months of the calendar year 1895, under Gorman-Wilsonism, our imports of woolen goods reached the enormous total of $40,66:,044, while our exports represented only the petty sum of $470,725. In the year following, during the corresponding eight months, our imports of foreign woolen goods were $29,544,094; our exports of American woolen goods, only $614,678. In 1897, when Gorman-Wilsonism expired amid the execrations of a robbed and angry people, our market was swamped under the importation of $27,714,064 worth of foreign woolen fabrics, while that "vast" foreign market which the tariff reform organs had promised took just $144,512 of American fabrics, or a quantity much smaller than in the years when wool had been "taxed."

In other words, from first to last, in general and in particular, the "tariff reform," "free wool" argument had proved in actual practice to be a fraud, a delusion, a disaster. It had not given American manufacturers command of their home market; it had deprived them of a great part of the home market which they controlled before. American mills under Gorman-Wilsonism made fewer goods than they had made with protected wool. Foreign fabrics dominated American consumption as they had not done for many years. Even though our mills resorted to the heroic expedient of cutting down the wages of their work people until they approximated to European standards, the country was inundated with cheap foreign fabrics in which shoddy was more conspicuous than wool.

Nor did the free wool humbug give American manufacturers one single dollar's worth of additional foreign trade. Our manufacturers, as we have seen, lost a great part of their home market under the "tariff reform" experiment. They had never had much of a foreign market, but they were worse off even here at the end of Gorman-Wilsonism than they were at the beginning. They sold in the eight months of 1897 only $144,512 of their products abroad, or about one-third of their exports at the opening of this period.

So much for Gorman-Wilsonism; so much for the practical workings of free wool and "tariff reform." Now let us look at the other side of the shield. Let us read the record of Republican protectionism. In the summer of 1897 (the calendar year) the Democratic tariff, which had benefited only our foreign competitors, was repealed, and the year 1898 was passed under the Dingley schedules, with a sufficient protection for our manufacturers and a very generous protection for our wool growers. What was the result? For one thing, the foreign manufacturers instantly lost nearly all of the grip upon the domestic market which their "tariff reform" benefactors had given them. Our total imports of woolen goods in the eight months of the fiscal year 1898 were only $11,681,158, or about one-quarter of what they were in the corresponding months of 1895, and less than one-third of what they were in the eight months of 1897. That is, the effect of Dingley protectionism was at once to increase the domestic demand for the products of American woolen mills to the amount of from twenty million to thirty million dollars.

In those same eight months of 1898 our exports of American woolen manufactures rose to $717,689, or about five times the figure of the free wool "tariff reform" period preceding. In the eight months of 1899 our imports of foreign woolens were $10,470,622; our exports of American goods $779,567. In the eight months of 1900, a period of great prosperity, when our people were able to purchase much, our imports of foreign woolens were $12,084,928, or about one-third of what they were in these same months of the last year of the "tariff reform" experiment. Our exports of American woolen fabrics again increased and were $886,030.

That is, under protectionism the American wool manufacturers are holding a very much larger part of their home market than they did under free wool "tariff reform," and are increasing their sales of certain special lines of American goods to foreign countries. We do not send all kinds of American woolen fabrics to the outer world. It will be some time, even under the stimulus of adequate protection to home enterprise and home capital, before our exports of American woolen fabrics become as large as our exports of cotton fabrics which have had much longer, more adequate and more persistent protection. Even now the foreigners supply too large a share of home demand for woolen fabrics.

But protectionism exemplified in the Dingley wool and woolen tariff has fulfilled to the letter every promise made of it as conspicuously as Gorman-Wilsonism has falsified every pledge of its deluded and now silent champions.

TO CURE A COLD IN ONE DAY

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box. 25c.

Some men can make a dollar go a long way, but they can't buy a reserved seat in heaven with it.

Many of your friends, or people whom you know of, have contracted consumption, pneumonia or other fatal diseases, by neglect of a simple cold or cough. Foley's Honey and Tar, a safe, sure and pleasant cough medicine, would have saved them. It is guaranteed. CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

When you see a young man cleaning a girl's bicycle, they are engaged; but when you see the operation reversed, they are married.

George A. Points, Upper Sandusky, O., writes: "I have been using Foley's Honey and Tar for hoarseness and find it the best remedy I ever tried. It stopped the cough immediately and relieved all soreness." CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

Bloomers will not have been in vain if the new woman can successfully compete with the old man in a match striking contest.

After exposure or when you feel a cold coming on, take Foley's Honey and Tar. It never fails to cure, and will prevent pneumonia or consumption if taken in time. CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

When a girl expresses a desire to take a spin on a tandem, the man on behind is always ready to second her motion.

J. W. Barnes, of Lowder, Ill., writes: "My little boy was very low with pneumonia. Unknown to the doctor we gave him Foley's Honey and Tar. The result was magical and puzzled the doctor, as it immediateyl stopped the racking cough and he quickly recovered." CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

There was a time when a woman was satisfied to go through her hubbie's pockets, but now she wants to wear the pants.

Mrs. T. Briddleman, of Parshallville, Mich., was troubled with salt rheum for thirteen years and had tried a number of doctors without relief. After two or three applications of Banner Salve, her hands became better and in a short time she was entirely cured. CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

When the fig tree bloomed in the garden of Eden, Adam and Eve gathered the leaves and used them for bloomers.

J. Odgers, of Frostburg, Md., writes: "I had a very bad attack of kidney complaint and tried Foley's Kidney Cure which gave me immediate relief, and I was perfectly cured after taking two bottles." Take no substitute. CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

When a man begins to imagine that he is in love with a bloomer girl, it's about time for him to stop drinking.

Today take Foley's Honey and Tar. It positively prevents pneumonia, or other serious results from colds. It may be too late tomorrow.

Most people who try to ride the wheel of fortune, manage to puncture the tire before they get very far.

RECOMMENDS IT TO TRAINMEN.

G. H. Hausan, Lima, O., Engineer, L. E. & W. R. R., writes: "I have been troubled a great deal with backache. I was induced to try Foley's Kidney Cure, and one bottle entirely relieved me. I gladly recommend it to any one, especially my friends, among the train men, who are usually similarly afflicted." CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

A woman never fully understands the hardness of the world until she falls off a bicycle a few times.

SCROFULA

is "bad blood." A little break of the skin becomes a sore; you come to have a good many perhaps. There are other manifestations of scrofula. This is the plain one.

There is a germ to be killed. You kill it with vital force.

What is that?

It's the power that life has. Full life is strong; scant life is weak.

Take Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil, to cultivate life. Abounding life is, perhaps, the cure of all diseases.

We'll send you a little to try if you like.
