The Baker City Republican has changed its name to the Oregon Republican, a decided improvement as its field of usefulness in Eastern Oregon is very extensive. The paper is under the editorial management of Edward Everett Young, one of the brightest young newspaper men in the Northwest and well and favorably known throughout Eastern Oregon.

America has no fear of a continental coalition against our productions. The idea of the powers of Europe combining for any purpose whatever is scarcely to be considered as possible and the permanence of such a combination would be altogether impossible. It is possible for the European powers to cause the American producers much inconvenience and some temporary loss, but the future markets for our products will be found elsewhere and we can well afford to gradually sever our commercial intercourse with the continent of Europe.

An electrical engineer connected with cotton mills at Shanghai, China, says that the great mills there with their cheap Chinese labor are unable to compete with American manufacturers. He declares that while the originators of the plans expected to reap great profits they have only realized about thirty per cent on their investments. He says that the reason why these mills cannot compete with those of America is that an American operator can do better work and four times more in a given time than a Chinese. This is very good news if true, but we are much inclined to doubt its accuracy.

Such of them as are alive will undoubtedly be considered by the next senate, but it does not follow by any means that they will be ratified as drawn up by Commissioner Kesson. If he had taken the pains to consult with the senators and had not relied so much on his own ideas as to how the treaties should be drawn, they would have fared better with the senate. Secretary Hay has learned a lesson in that respect and now, when he is negotiating a treaty, like that concerning the Nicaragua canal, he takes pains to consult the senators.

CONSUMPTION

is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be—in the beginning.

The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself, and at home.

Take Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil, and live carefully every way.

This is sound doctrine, whatever you may think or be told; and, if heeded, will save life.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like. SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Paul street, New York.

REVISION AND RECIPROcity.

Philadelphia Press. Secretary Gage and others familiar with the president's views of the tariff question are very much amused over the statement in a number of newspapers to the effect that the president wants the tariff modified. His expressions of opinion on the reciprocity question furnish the ground from which such inferences are made.

There is the very best authority for saying that all such inferences are without any foundation whatever. The president does not want any tariff changes now, and has not long ago expressed himself to that effect at a meeting in the White House. So far as reciprocity is concerned, his opinion on that subject is just the same now as it was when he supported the reciprocity provision in the McKinley act of 1890. He frequently spoke in favor of reciprocity in the fifty-first congress, and time and again advocated the subject on the stump before he became president. Hence his recent expressions of opinion in regard to reciprocity are no indication of any change in view on his part on the tariff question.

The Republican party has always favored tariff changes which seemed to be wise. In that way the tariff has been changed at different times, so that instead of practically all articles being on the dutiable list, as was the case at one time, nearly half of the imports are now altogether free of duty. At the same time there have been reductions in rates on the dutiable articles. There will be other changes in the future, but President McKinley is not in favor of any action in the way of a revision of the tariff in the existing congress. But he is in favor of reciprocity, and unquestionably something will be done on that subject at the next session. His views in that respect, however, as already stated, have not changed in the least degree in the last ten years.

Some of the reciprocity treaties sent to the last congress, it can be said, did not represent any ripe opinion in their favor on the part of the president. He never recommended the ratification of the French treaty. He transmitted it to the senate without recommendation. In private conversation he is understood to have told some senators who opposed that treaty that he had not time personally to investigate the merits of each article, but that he was in favor of a reciprocity treaty, and that if the treaty was not acceptable to the senate it should amend it and make it acceptable, as it has done with other treaties. He was opposed, however, to shelving it as was done in the senate. Still that was largely the result of Democratic opposition to the shipping and some other measures which led to the consumption of so much time that the treaties could not be acted on.

Such of them as are alive will undoubtedly be considered by the next senate, but it does not follow by any means that they will be ratified as drawn up by Commissioner Kesson. If he had taken the pains to consult with the senators and had not relied so much on his own ideas as to how the treaties should be drawn, they would have fared better with the senate. Secretary Hay has learned a lesson in that respect and now, when he is negotiating a treaty, like that concerning the Nicaragua canal, he takes pains to consult the senators.

A man sometimes loses his head, but a woman seldom loses her tongue. "A few months ago, food which I ate for breakfast would not remain on my stomach for half an hour. Nothing equals Kodol Dyspepsia Cure for stomach troubles." H. S. Pitts, Arlington, Tex. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat. CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.

Perseverance will not do everything but it certainly works wonders. Dyspepsia cannot be long lived because to live requires nourishment. Food is not nourishing until it is digested. A disordered stomach cannot digest food. It must have assistance. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests all kinds of food without aid from the stomach, allowing it to rest and regain its natural functions. Its elements are exactly the same as the natural digestive fluids and it simply can't help but do you good. CHAS. ROGERS, Druggist.
