

DIRT CLEARANCE.

It is a good plan for every bather to know something of the soap he uses. There is a well-founded objection to using a floor-cleaning soap upon the human body. Ivory Soap is the bather's soap. It costs more than common soaps, but the difference is in the ingredients and making. Why not treat yourself with a little respect. Is not the human skin with its marvellous delicacy entitled to pure soap? Ivory Soap—it floats.

This weather is suitable for watermelons. We have watermelons suitable for this weather.—Johnson Bros. There was a fine display of August meteors in the heavens Monday night. They appeared to be from one of the constellations near the North Pole. Roslyn coal lasts longer, is cleaner and makes less trouble with stoves and chimneys than any other. George W. Sanborn, agent; telephone 1311. The teachers' examinations began yesterday at the county court house and will continue during the week. Nine applicants were examined yesterday. At a meeting of the regatta committee yesterday it was decided that the position of the local salmon men that no beer be sold in the German village at the street fair be granted. The union picnic announced for next Friday by the Baptist and Methodist Sabbath schools has been postponed one week to give time for more complete arrangements and announcements. The lightship did not get outside yesterday owing to rough weather and a heavy fog on the bar. The lightship tender Marlboro will make another effort to tow the lightship out today. Mrs. W. T. Chuter, who was appointed by the regatta committee to select a committee to entertain the queen, Miss Barker, has named the Mesdames C. W. Fulton, C. L. Houston and Richardson to assist her. The Washington authorities have asked Sheriff Livvill, to detain a fisherman known as "Russian Pete," who was wanted at Brookfield for the falling to return a borrowed boat. The man is in the county jail. The Sunday school of the First Lutheran church will give an excursion to Chinook on Tuesday, August 20. The steamer will leave Hawthorn's cannery at 7 a. m. and Fisher Bros' wharf at 7:30 a. m. Tickets 50 cents. The steamer Sue H. Elmore is being loaded on the ways at the Portland Shipbuilding Company's yard in South Portland for the purpose of repainting. She is due to sail for Tillamook again about Monday next. Long's famous table delicacies can be found at Foard & Stokes Co. Finest preserves on the market. Strawberries, blackberries, apples and sliced oranges. If you enjoy something real nice, Long's preserves will fill the bill. C. H. Marsh and Mrs. Marsh are registered at the Occident from Clatsop beach. Mr. Marsh is a member of the firm of Marz & Connolly, proprietors of the Summit Mine. They will remain in Astoria for three or four days. The feed mill erected by R. M. Gaston will start operation September 1. Mr. Gaston will leave in a few days for The Dalles, where he will contract for grain to supply the mill. The capacity of the plant will be 400 pounds an hour. The British bark Dunfermline, with a cargo of grain for Europe, was prevented from going to sea yesterday by the heavy weather prevailing outside. An effort was made to leave but the tugs were obliged to return to the inner harbor. Late advice from Dawson fell of an effort made by George O'Brien, under sentence of death for murder, to commit suicide while in his cell by cutting his heel against the prison walls. He also tried to strangle himself with a pocket handkerchief. Nace Grant and H. F. Brewer, who are matched for a swimming race during the regatta, were out for practice yesterday and swam from the Telephone dock nearly to Tongue Point and returned, and both men emerged from the water in excellent condition. Dr. Hill Hastings, formerly quarantined officer at this port, arrived in the city yesterday and will remain until after the regatta. Dr. Hastings is now stationed at Los Angeles and has recently returned from a big game hunting expedition in British Columbia. The DeMay-Cole match is off through the refusal of Cole to keep the agreement previously made to meet DeMay here during the regatta. Manager Fred Brown will secure some good man to take Cole's place if possible, and announcement will be made later. Owing to the death of Fred Wickman, who was the complaining witness, the case of the state against Fire Chief Stockton, charged with throwing sawdust into the river, was postponed until next Tuesday when called for trial before Justice of the Peace Brewer yesterday. The sawmills in the Lower Stuslaw country have been compelled to close down owing to the strike at San Francisco. All of the mills are overstocked with finished lumber and have no outlet for their production. Orders have been sent to the camps to discharge everybody and shut down immediately. The O. E. & N. has made a rate of $60 from Astoria and Portland for the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo. Tickets will be on sale first to third Tuesdays, June to October, inclusive. These tickets must be used for continuous passage going, but stopovers will be allowed within final limit returning.

Lee Herring returned yesterday from Elk Creek, where he had been on an outing the past five days. Scott Smith, a logger working in Hadden's cabin on the river, was brought to the city last evening, suffering from a wound on the head inflicted by a cable. Smith had been struck on the head by the cable, which was caught on a stump, and rendered unconscious, and the chances for his recovery are doubtful. He is lying in St. Mary's hospital. Parties desiring furniture should not overlook the opportunity to purchase at E. Danziger's. While considerable has been added there still remains unsold some parlor furniture, china and glassware, kitchen utensils, curtains, walnut bedroom set, etc., which must be sold within the next fifteen days. Hon. C. W. Fulton has presented a protest to the county court alleging that the proposed leasing of the Nehalem river is illegal because it does not come within the legal definition of an navigable stream. Judge Magers has invited County Judge Gray and the commissioners to be present at a meeting to be held on the 17th inst., at which time representatives of the Wheeler Lumber Company will meet the settlers of the country along the streams involved and will endeavor to overcome their opposition to the county court granting their petition. The Eugene Guard is out with a roast for Master Fish Warden Van Dusen because he believes that the state hatchery on the Stuslaw could be more advantageously located elsewhere. The Guard tells of the establishment of the hatchery and its maintenance by the Beas Brothers, and closes with the following: "Now comes Fish Commissioner Van Dusen, of Astoria, and makes a report, saying the building is out of requirements that the hatchery business, located at the wrong point, and on the Stuslaw be abandoned. He was at the hatchery building and Head of Tide one hour hour and found this all out. Less than $100 would place the building and trawls in good repair. Messrs. Hubbard and McGuire, expert salmon men, disagree with the Great Van Dusen as to the location. The people of the Stuslaw river and of Lane county condemn the report as being untrue and malicious. Still this fellow, Van Dusen, wants to establish a hatchery on the Coquille river which is known as a small salmon stream. The people of Lane county en masse should see, that this great industry should be protected and the hatchery maintained and a sufficient appropriation made to hatch 2,000,000 or more chinook salmon annually."

THE SEASON'S PACK. Conservative and Authentic Figures Place the Total at 229,000 Cases. Conservative and authentic figures place the season's pack of salmon on the Columbia river at 229,000 cases up to the close of the season tonight at midnight. The pack last year was 300,000 cases, so that the present pack falls considerably short. In a measure this is made up by the exceptionally fine quality of the fish packed. Cannermen who have been on the river for years do not hesitate to say that finer salmon were never before handled and in no instance in such quantities. The pack is divided as follows: Columbia River Packers Ass'n.... 96,000 Co-operative Packing Company... 21,000 Cutting & Sanborn 19,000 A. Both Packing Co. 18,000 Pillar Rock Packing Co. 20,000 J. G. Megler & Co. 18,000 P. M. Warren (Cathlamet) 8,000 P. M. Warren (Cascades) 7,500 P. J. McGowan & Sons 10,000 P. J. McGowan & Sons (Cascades) 7,000 Seufert Bros. 4,500 Total 229,000 In addition about two thousand tons of fish were handled by the cold storage plants, accurate figures of which are not obtainable. During the big run carloads of salmon were shipped daily to the up-river canneries and it is estimated that McGowan's cannery at the Cascades packed at least 100 tons of the overflow in the catch. An interesting feature of the annual pack on the Columbia is the amount of money necessary to place the produce on the market. In the grain fields of the Middle West immense amounts of money are required from the banks of the big cities to move the crop and so also there must be a large sum invested in the salmon pack, which is paid out before the returns come in. A canneryman conversant with the requirements of the industry stated yesterday to an Astorian reporter that it would take about $2,500,000 to place the pack on the market, including the products of the cold storage plants. The congestion of the canneries during the big runs and the consequent scarcity of labor will probably result in the increased employment of white labor by the cannerymen next summer. The Union Co-operative cannery employed large numbers of white men and women and children and found them satisfactory. Secretary Nelson, of the company, said yesterday in discussing the matter: "We found the white labor satisfactory in some of the departments though of course their employment was made necessary by the unusually large run. As to whether or not they would be preferable to Chinese labor it would be difficult to say. There is no doubt but that the white workmen could do satisfactory work after they become familiar with packing house methods. They could probably do quite as well as the Chinese labor but other things must be taken into consideration. "Suppose that the canneries were equipped with white labor and that in the midst of a heavy run like we have recently seen the men should present a strike or otherwise the proposed demands were granted. Where would the canneries be? The chances are we would lose the entire run. Then again some other labor organization with which the cannery operatives were affiliated might walk out and a sympathetic strike would be declared as has been done in San Francisco. With Chinese labor there is no trouble of that sort. However, I presume that the percentage of white labor employed in the cannery will be increased next year."

Undoubtedly the thrilling experience that the late Fred Wickman had with the fishermen at Maygers, just previous to the opening of the season, aggravated the ailment from which he suffered and which ultimately killed him. It will be recalled that; Wickman and Deputy Fish Commissioner McReavy were making a trip up the river looking for violators of the closed season and their activity in confiscating gear being illegally used by the fishermen aroused a resentful feeling. Wickman (and at Maygers to telephone the news of an arrest; to Warden Van Dusen, the launch proceeding up the river. It was Wickman's intention to take the train and return to Astoria with McReavy. But the fishermen learned of his presence and for a moment it looked as though a lynching was being brewed. They gathered around him when he attempted to board the train and prevented his departure. Threats were made by members of the mob. Wickman was not armed, having left his weapons in the launch when landing. Finally he was allowed to depart and rather than remain in the place and take chances on the fishermen changing their minds regarding leniency toward him he set out for Rainier. He was suffering then from rheumatism so that any exertion was painful and it was long drawn out torture to be compelled to make the dreary trip along the railroad track in a drizzling rain storm. For some time past Wickman was in ill health and for the past week a substitute has been serving for him. The definite announcement is made that the funeral of the late Fred Wickman will be held Saturday morning at 10 o'clock and the details will be made public later. The news of Wickman's death was a surprise to his friends and acquaintances. It was known that he had been ill frequently of late and was suffering from attacks of rheumatism but it was not expected that the ailment would result fatally. Fred Wickman was one of the best known Finnish citizens of Astoria and in fact in the Northwest. He was active in the formation of a national organization of the Finnish Brotherhood and was grand president of the supreme lodge and president of the Astoria lodge of the brotherhood. The last named office he had held for twelve years successively. Wickman was born in Uleaborg, Finland, and was 39 years of age. For the past twenty years he has lived in Astoria and has been a power politically with the Fin population. He was councilman from the Third ward in 1890, and at the last county election ran as an independent candidate for sheriff. Since the appointment of H. G. Van Dusen as master fish warden Mr. Wickman occupied the position of water bailiff. He was of unusual value to the warden on account of his intimate acquaintance with the fishermen and his knowledge of the industry. In the contest for the position of master fish warden Wickman had the endorsement of several prominent politicians for the deputy wardenship. A widow, now in Nome, and a sister, Mrs. Mangas, of Silver Lake, Wash., survive. The deceased was a member of the A. O. U. W.

SIGHTS AT THE SHOW. Some of the Things That Will Be Seen at the Street Fair and Carnival. George Jabowsky's variety entertainment in his Street Fair amusements is calculated to appeal to every person according to his taste. For those who like music the gither playing in the Tyrolean peasants, the rendering of the famous Swiss "Ranz les Vaches," the fiddling of the Swiss herdsmen, the music of the Arabians, resembling nothing more in the world than the psalter and sackbut of the old Syrian days read about in one's childhood, the tom-tom accompaning the feats of the Indian jugglers and the rhythmic motions of the auto dancers will each and all appeal in varying degrees to those cultivated in what has well been called the sixth sense. Others find more pleasure in watching the motion of the dancers, gathered from every clime. In the fair can be witnessed the cachucha of the Spaniard; the fandango of the Mexican; the sword dance of the Highlander; the hornpipe of the sailor; the strathspey of the Scotchman, varied with the naught of the Hindoo; the hula of the Hawaiian and the muselo dancers of the Algerian and the Egyptian. Others find still greater pleasure in intently observing, half horrified and yet wholly unable to tear away their fascinated vision, the daring 70-foot jump of the high diver from the highest ladder available in the city into a small tank of water not more than eight feet deep. They watch with growing trepidation the mounting of the diver into the air, his gathering of himself together for the delicately balanced poise and then the breathless swoop through the air followed by a resounding splash sending up many gallons of water announcing that the jump has once more been safely accomplished. The strains of waltz music attracts the spectator into the street of Carlo, where he will be confronted with the amazing sight of a whirling dervish whose endless gyrations fading so swiftly that it is impossible to distinctly observe his features, have been known to go on for 40 minutes, slackening and quickening with the monotonous but peculiarly fascinating music of the tambours. Then follows a scene baffling description. Some dozen acrobats whose swarthy lineaments and apparently jointless limbs proclaim their true garments of El Khayreh, the Holy City, are seen whirling, turning wheeling and somersaulting all over the stage with such baffling rapidity and much celerity of changing figures that the spectator already bewildered by the unaccustomed and guttural cries accompanying the feats of "wah wah!" "ajabi!" "Shah-booh!" "salamat!" is ready to vouch that at least fifty performers crowd the boards. Then there are the graceful feats of the flying Austin sisters upon the trapeze, which once seen will never be forgotten. Such is the case with these different feats are performed that the spectator, deceived by the grace of the performance, is apt to forget the imminent danger which lies behind a mistake. Again there are the animals under the charge of the old veteran, Col. Boone, a son of the famous Indian fighter and scout, Dan Boone, and himself no unscarred warrior, which never fail to delight the children and attract the attention of the grown up. Scenes from the life of the Oriental and from unaccustomed nooks in all nations confront the visitor at every turn. He is not able to grasp the whole fair at any one visit and is a spectator again and again.
