SUPREMACT IN AMERICAN WATERS.

In the present international struggle for commercial supremacy some nasions create markets, some struggle for them and some find them, but it to not often that a nation finds a mar-Cuba and the United States today. congress asking the United States to come and sell all the island needs to buy, and yet congress seems to think the offer.

No better opportunity was ever presented to make a profitable reciprocal Cuba would be turned to the United States, and this without destroying a rate (the latter to apply only to the United States), amounting to from island's trade to the United States, to ural and manufacturing industry. We stuff, boots, shoes, leather goods-in short, we would supply the imports of Cuba.

. This is, however, only half of what Cuba offers. Poor as she is, she is now begging and asking us to look to a clear conscience for our reward. Cuba is offering a valuable exchange for all concessions granted. The Cuban people propose not only to buy of the United States, but they agree to confine the carrying trade between the Cuban vessels, and to grant Cuban registry only to such vessels as may hereafter be built in the United States. This is a most valuable consideration. The United States coastwise regulations now apply between the ports of Rico. An arrangement such as Cuba offers would make them apply pracically between Cuba and the United States, and with the entire trade of these two islands secure to us the be in our hands-a commerce sufficiently large to be worthy of the earnest efforts of statesmen anywhere.

The German, Norwegian and Engtish vessels which now ply the Guif can do so with profit only because of the trade of those islands together with the trade of the mainland. With and Porto Rican ports, and possibly all those of the Danish West Indies. American vessels would make stops at the ports of Venezuela, Colombia. Central America and Mexico, and it is an admitted truth that trade follows a nation's vespels. In this manner the peaceable conquest of all Spanish-American markets bordering on the Gulf would be secured. This would be worsh to the United States. both in freight and trade, many times the amount of duty we should be called upon to sacrifice by granting substantial reductions of the present high dutes on raw augurs.

Thus the high moral duty to deal fulrly with Cuba demands that Cuba's an opportunity to make a bargain and make the United States commercial marine supreme in American waters.

Up to the present time Andrew Carnegie has established 177 libraries two countries to United States and tox soo. He has now stopped his generous work long enough to arrange for a library of his own at his residence. Skibo castle, the total number of volumes being $000 and the immediate outlay $50,000. The professor of history at Oxford is to select the books the United States and those of Porto for him, but Mr. Carnegie has indicated the classes of books he wishes to have on the shelves. On this point the Chicago Tribune discusses the facts that they are of interest as showcommerce of the Gulf of Mexico would brary founder, and include 100 volumes of speeches, and sets of the lives raphies seem to be his favorites. He is interested in the lives of real men rather than the adventures of imaginary persons the accomplishments of science or the speculations of philosothe certainty of freight at all Cuban phy. This goes to show that he is a practical literary man himself.
