Poets have been fond of likening woman to a flower. Her fairness is flowerlike. Her sweetness suggests the flower fragrance. sweetness suggests the flower fragtance Her very fragility finds its type again in the frail flower, which languishes when reglected, and is so easily destroyed. It is a pretty simile and almost as perfect as All women love flowers, and every woman All women love howers, and every woman who grows them knows that their health depends on daily care. Not alone are water and sunshine necessary to the health of the plant. Their leaves and roots must be guarded from the parasites which soon lesting the flower's beauty and undermine its life.

If a woman would care for herself as she does for her plants she would preserve her beauty and retain her strength far beyond the period when the average woman looks old and feels older than she looks.
