THE NEED OF ADVERTISING.

A great tide of immigration is about to set in to the West. Thousands of Eastern people are to seek homes here. where the opportunities in all lines are more favorable, and where the poor man may live and maintain his independence. The rush will come during the next few months, and every train will bring hundreds of strangers into

If Astoria is to get her share of these homeseckers, she must work after their arrival on the coast. She has neglected to do the preliminary advertising that is so essential to the attraction of new people, and nothing but good fortune will give this city its share of the immigration that is to come,
