lar stress on the fact that the unfil- forts, eation of South America would give the Yankees something to attend to dling in European affairs. This kin i of rot shows the enmity of the European press to the United States. It might be well for Europe to understand that the creation of a worldin South America would strengthen the position of the United States, and it is now and always will neighbors, and to unite with them in for reasons very much in evidence, repelling encroachments by European and by the way, those said legs suppowers. The unification of the South American states would prevent the petty revolutions at present, of every day occurrence, and rapid development in agriculture, manufacture and the arts would follow. The combined population of the South American states million. The available fighting forces, both army and navy, is enoromus, and to a great extent equipped with modern weapons. The southerners are excellent fighters and very warlike. The combined navies of the southern republics would make a formidable show-Prance. It is possible that the time is at hand when a treaty will be signed bringing the southern republics together. A federal government similar to that of the United States will be established at some central point. fast dragging this country out of its coasted freedom.

While movements are rife for the exclusion of foreign labor, our esteemd friend with the Portland tower commends, under certain conditions, a welcome to Finns as immigrants to the States. As a general rule the Finns are engaged in developing this country in positions that Amerian born men do not want. But they are a depressed people and are about to b shamefully subjurated to a despotic tule. Therefore, this republic, whose motto is "freedom," is only supporting our owa doctrine in showing these poor, uneducated people that we make no empty boast. We certainly concur with the Oregonian that we can afford to welcome any workers vided that their intentions are to be useful laborers under, and loval sunporters of the Stars and Stripes.
