The Pendleton East Oregonian, which expresses bitter disappointment at the defeat of W. J. Furnish for governor attributes the loss of the office to Portland and the Willamette valley. "As long as we remain quiet and conrious factions of Portland and the vallev, we are considered as doing our part well," says that paper, "But when we begin to ask favors in return we are eyed askance and fealously robbed of our honest deserts. Now the senatorial question is coming up. What shall we have to say about it? Is there a man among them (the candidates) who is friendly to this part of Oregon? Oregon needs a liberal-minded man to represent it in the senate. Political factionalism should not be considered in the selection." To which the Port land Chronicle offers the following advice: "The Tribune has not far to seek the man who was loyal to the Eastern Oregon candidate or who is the friend of that section. Hon C. W. Fulton worked like a trojan for Eastera Oregon and the whole Republican ticket. He deserves the support of Eastern Oregon in his manly and open effort to be the party candidate for

The king himself had planned an American visit, but his demands in the way of reception made it impossible for Uncle Sam to take care of him in the regulation Siames manner. So the prince came instead. He is being fitted for his father's shoes, and comes here in search of practical knowledge. It is to be hoped that he will do better than another member of the royal household, who was sent to Europe for two years to acquire a thorough knowledge of a public school system. Immediately on his return home he was made minister of education, and his first official act was to declare all pretty school girls members of his harem. The prince is

Overcrowding is the motto of the day. The factories are overcrowded. The theaters are overcrowded. The tenements are overcrowded. The only the overcrowding of the bar. In 1891 there were 58 law schools with 6077 students. Now, according to an estimate made by Professor Hoffcutt, of 14,000 students. Meanwhile the number of full-fledged lawyers in the United States is said by the last census to be about 114,000. No other profession, with the exception of teach

It is claimed that Harvey Scott, who has repeatedly stated that he was no sition in the hands of friends, expecting them to urge his claims while he is spending the winter in Europe. He expects to return, however, in time to be on the ground when the legislature meets. Mr. Scott will probably make a strong fight, but no man with all the sins of the Portland Oregonia; hanging over his head will ever be elected to office. -East Oregonian.

Over in Seattle the papers-some of them-are demanding a city regulation that will prohibit the early morning blowing of factory whistles. The practice is a nuisance and ought to be abated. The blowing of steamboat whistles should likewise be prohibited by law. If trains can get slong with out ear-splitting whistles, boats can dispense with their annoying blast Astoria needs just such an ordinance as that asked for in Seattle.
