

quorum, which must see the matter through at every stage. The disagreeable street soliciting is left to them, and in many instances the business men have not only refused to help, but have actually declined financial assistance. It is to be hoped that this lack of progressiveness will soon end, and that meetings will be more largely attended in the future. If every commercial meeting in Astoria had been attended by 30 or 40 prominent bustness men during the past two years, Astoria today would have four times as many industrial concerns. It is to the interests of the business men to
