New Cold Storage.

Newspaper Man Married

Miss Anna J. Gustafson was yesterday united in marriage to Richard Cloyd Lee, city editor of the Budget. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon in Grace Episcopal church before a few intimate friends of the couple. Miss Breckenridge was brides maid and W. F. Grube stood up with Mr. Lee. Tinplate Delayed.

Very little tinplate has yet arrived for the season's demands of salmon cans, and can making has barely started as yet in the canneries. Many carloads are on the way but are now three weeks behind the time specified for their arrival. The American Can company is out of some sizes and has been forced to cut tin at a waste to keep going. Likewise salmon shipped from Astoria has lately arrived in New York 95 days after shipment. The railroads are either enjoying an immense business or the various strikes are responsible for the holdups, probably the former. Otherwise preparations for the fishing season go on galore. Fishboats, gasoline launches, steamers, schooners and skiffs are being launched ready for business, and all is to be in readiness in six more days for handling the large early run which is expected.

Wanted In Portland.

It has developed that the two men who were detained by Sheriff Linville Tuesday evening on suspicion of having stolen a lot of wire that they had in their possession are wanted in Portland and warrants for their appearance there were issued yesterday. The telltale evidence against them is a knife which one of them had in his possession and which was inscribed with "J. N. Collins, Portland, Oregon." A Portlander was held up not long ago and his knife, bearing that name, was taken from him. Two men answering to the description of the prisoners have been terrorizing Portland for some time and the frequent holdups there are attributed to the scamps now in custody. An officer arrived from Portland last night to assume charge of the men and they will, in all probability, be taken to Portland today.

History of Oregon

One of the most valuable histories of Oregon yet written has recently come off the press and its author is Superintendent H. S. Lyman. The work is published in four volumes and bears the title: "History of Oregon, or the Growth of an American State." It is published by the North Pacific Publishing company. Liberal space is given in last Sunday's Oregonian to a review of Mr. Lyman's work, in which the following strong endorsement appears: "Mr. Lyman has conceived his task in large spirit. His outlook is from the standpoint of universal interest, and, while the touch of provincial enthusiasm and even of domestic affection may be traced all through his work, there is no let-down from the manifest purpose to give the record its true historic perspective. It is plainly the aim of the author to make a history of Oregon not merely for Oregonians, but for whoever in the liberal spirit of broad historic inquiry may seek to discover Oregon's place and share in the general record of American life and development. With a discretion particularly to be commended he has dealt in the judicial spirit with those special matters which have been made subject of controversy, giving with fairness the general facts with impartial summaries of arguments relating to them."

From One Who Debated

Astoria, April 8—Editor Morning Astorian: In this morning's issue of The Astorian there appeared an item from J. M. Hughes complaining that the Budget had quoted his name as having taken part in the debate last Monday night at Labor hall, instead of mine. He is perfectly justified in having the error corrected, but he is not justified when he intimates that those who took part in the debate are socialists. Debating societies are schools of education, and it a well known fact that the members are sometimes called upon by the chairman to take the side which Mr. Hughes knows well. In the debate referred to the leader on the negative failed to appear, and to make the debate as interesting as possible, under the circumstances, and as no one else seemed willing to take his place, I volunteered, not as a socialist, but as one who was seeking knowledge. Mr. Hughes calls the debate a wrangle, which is an injustice to the society and to the participants. On behalf of the society, I ask you to insert this in your paper. Chas. Hough.

Ladd would be in Astoria next Wednesday evening, April 15 for the purpose of meeting the citizens and business men relative to the proposition for a Clatsop county representation in the exhibit now being installed in the union depot in Portland. This exhibit is meant to represent the resources and attractive features of every part of Oregon and will be seen and examined by thousands of homeseekers and tourists. It is desired that the business men generally turn out to hear what the gentlemen have to say.

W. E. Schimpff was elected a member of the club.

By unanimous rising vote a resolution was passed instructing the secretary to extend to Richard C. Lee the congratulations and approbation of the club on the occasion of his taking to himself a helpmeet.

The club received a compliment from Colonel Drake on the handsome and effective illustrated booklet sent out not long ago to advertise Clatsop county. The colonel said it was one of the best he had seen and that he had sent copies to several other counties as models for them to follow.

A communication was received from F. W. Ferguson, formerly of Astoria and now living in San Diego, stating that he could make good use of Astoria booklets among the tourists there if some were forwarded to him. He said: "It is astonishing how little Astoria is known among the eastern people who visit California. Some of them have been asking the fair and taking in Astoria."
